Tito Hints He'll Aid Fight on Aggressors

U. S. Is Lauded And Told Relief Must Carry No Political Strings

BELGRADE, Oct. 29 (U.P.).—Marshal Tito publicly praised the United States tonight and for the first time indirectly pledged Yugoslavia's full support to the United States against any attemptd Russian aggrssion.

Tito also announced that his appeal to the United States for 105 million dollars in food relief was now being negotiated in Washington. His tacit pledge of support was based on the condition that American help carry no political strings.

It was Tito's first public address since the drought-seared Yugoslav crops had forced him to appeal to the United States. Authoritative diplomatic sources here said it was his most important foreign policy pronouncement since the break with Russia and the Cominform.

"Those who are for peace can always rely on our support and can always have us on their side, while those who are collaborating for aggression can be certain to have us against them," Tito said.

He praised America for responding to his plea with deeds and he criticized the Soviet Union for its history of "promises with words."

"Who actually helped Yugoslavia after the war?" he asked his audience. "We got 430 million dollars with food and machines and other things from UNRRA—the most important member (contributor) of which was the United States," he said.

Tito spoke to the opening session of the third congress of the Joint Anti-Fascist Women's League in Zagreb.

Dean Smith Pledges Church Will Fight For American Way

Nearly 10,000 Catholics attended a Holy Year rally in honor of Christ the King in the Catholic University stadium yesterday afternoon.

They saw a colorful procession including top members of the archdiocese hierarchy and heard a spirited pledge for an all-out church fight for the American way of life and against communism.

The Very Rev. Ignatius Smith, dean of the CU school of philosophy, in the keynote sermon said, "We are determined—without desire for union of church and state—that the God upon whom this Nation was founded shall not be exiled from its homes, its schools or its legislative halls.

"We are determined to use every resource in our possession to arrest the spread of godless communism," he said.

"We are resolved that the liberties that constitute the American way of living shall neither be surrendered by our citizens in the name of security nor absorbed by government in the name of welfare.

"We are determined that this Nation shall give to all recognition of human dignity, a share in the marvelous resorces given by God to our country, continued security in property rights and an opportunity for complete development of personality."

Among those participating in the religious event were the Most Rev. Patrick A. O'Boyle, Archbishop of Washington; his auxiliary bishops, the Most Rev. John M. McNamara and the Most Rev. Patrick J. McCormick, also rector of Catholic University; and the Most Rev. Thomas Angus Wam, Bishop of Southern India.

More than 300 members of the procession formed the outline of a cross on the stadium turf, stretching over 60 yards.

The rally was under the auspices of the Archdiocesan Union of Holy Name Societies, of which the Rev. Joseph M. Moran, pastor of St. Thomas' Church is spiritual director. Father Moran presided at the gathering.

3000 Turned Away

Protestants Jam Arena Here As Six-Day Mission Begins

By Tom Schlesinger
Post Reporter

Washington's most ambitious preaching mission began with turnaway crowds at Uline Arena last night.

Billed as a Protestant Festival of Faith Rally, more than 10,000 persons occupied every seat in the building while an estimated 3000 more were turned away.

The Rev. Robert J. McCracken lashed out at disunity within Protestant denominations and called for "a closing up of ranks with a view to combined operations."

The minister, who succeeded Harry Emerson Fosdick at New York City's Riverside Church, said "Whatever the origin of our divisions and differences, civilization is engaged in a race with catastrophe and the basic principles of Christianty are widely challenged and in many quarters repudiated."

"Some way must be found to unify our scattered forces," Dr. McCracken urged. He said the Roman Catholic church is now "the largest single religious body in this country with 23 million members, while the Protestants—divided into 256 denominations—actually outnumber them almost 2 to 1.

"At no point is Protestantism so vulnerable as at its disunity," he said.

Two other factors desperately needed are education and propagation, he said.

"If—as the most immediate of the tasks confronting them in America—Protestants are to safeguard and propagate their fundamental principles, they will need to know them better than they do," Dr. McCracken said.

"There is an appalling ignorance among us as to our elementary doctrines . . . We have a tremendous teaching mission to perform in Protestantism. We had better go about it in our church schools and in our pulpits systematically and without apology. . . .

"We shall have to cease flitting from text to text in the Bible, according to casual interest or idle fancy . . . We shall have to preach constantly on central themes—the infinite worth of the individual soul, the right of the immediate access to God, salvation by faith, by inward personal trust in Christ. We shall have to protest against the corruption of the Gospel which is inevitable with an autocratic institution greedy for power and self.

". . . The call to the Protestant Church in an hour like the present is to close up its ranks with a view to combined operations.

". . . We are not making the progress we might because Protestants do not care, or do not care enough, or do not let others know that they care."

Speaking briefly also were the

Ho's Forces Puncture New French Line

Pressure on Laokay Increasing; Fall of Fortress Imminent

SAIGON, Indo-China, Oct. 29 (U.P.).—Viet Minh rebels have punctured the new French defense line 120 miles east and north of Hanoi and, on the far north frontier, have driven to within 1600 yards of Fort Pennequin, the outpost guarding Laokay, a French military spokesman said today.

Communist gains in the battle for the big bastion of Laokay, which opened Tuesday, have been measured in yards. But the spokesman admitted that the Red attacks, backed up by artillery, were becoming "stronger and stronger."

French evacuation of Laokay, 160 miles northwest of Hanoi along a natural invasion corridor, appeared likely at any minute. The spokesman said Laokay will not be defended to the last man, but he denied reports, emanating from usually reliable sources in Paris, that the garrison was now in the process of being withdrawn.

The French garrison was ordered to pull back from Dinhlap, between Nen Yen and Moncay on the northeast border, because of its "bad geographic position"—surrounded by mountain crests—the spokesman said. Menaced by Viet Minh legions on the north and northwest, the French retreated without casualties to an unidentified post "some miles" to the southeast.

In the north, one Communist spearhead pushing toward Laokay from the east was hurling its force on a French entrenchment

King Gustav Mourned by All Sweden

Crown Prince Takes Oath as Successor Today; Monarch Victim of Old Age

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, Oct. 29 (AP).—All Sweden mourned today the death of King Gustav V and paid homage to the new ruler who succeeds him, 67-year-old Crown Prince Gustaf Adolf.

Preparations were being made for a state funeral for Europe's oldest reigning monarch, who died quietly at Drottningholm Palace this morning, at 92.

King Gustaf's waning health, harassed by chronic bronchial catarrh, took a fatal turn Friday after he had made his last regular official appearance before the cabinet.

The official death certificate, issued after the King's death at 8:35 a. m. (2:35 a. m., EST), read:

"His Majesty King Gustaf V has passed away quietly and peacefully today at Drottningholm Palace at an age of 92 years, 4 months and 13 days, following a chronic bronchial catarrh with bronchiectasiae (dilation of bronchial tubes) and alterations in the organs of circulation owing to old age."

President Truman and Secretary of State Acheson expressed their sorrow in messages to the new King and Foreign Minister Osten Unden.

The crown prince's wife, Princess Louise, granddaughter of Britain's Queen Victoria and sister of Lord Louis Mountbatten, became the queen. Four-year-old Prince Carl Gustaf, great-grandson of the late king, is the new crown prince.

The new king will be sworn in formally at a ceremony in the royal palace at noon 6 a. m. EST) Monday. King Gustaf himself did away with the ancient coronation rites and substituted a simple state ceremony.

At the death bed was Princess Sybilla, the King's granddaughter-in-law. Shortly afterward Prince Wilhelm, his second son, and Prince Bertil, third in succession, arrived at the palace just outside Stockholm. Princess Sybilla is the mother of the new crown prince and widow of the King's eldest grandson, who was killed in a plane crash in 1947.

Swedes hurrying to the newsstands to read the black-bordered newspapers, made no effort to hide their weeping.

Session Called For Today on Lie Successor

Austin Acts on Malik 'Emergency' Request; Assembly Is Held Up

LAKE SUCCESS, Oct. 29 (AP). Russia today asked for an emergency Security Council session to consider a successor to United Nations Secretary General Trygve Lie.

United States Delegate Warren R. Austin, October president of the Council, immediately summoned a meeting for 11 a. m. Monday.

Russia's move came as the United States and 13 other countries circulated a resolution asking the veto-free General Assembly to extend Lie's term by three years.

The issue had been tossed to the Assembly last week when the Council failed tot agree to an alternate candidate. The Assembly has a plenary meeting scheduled for Tuesday, with the extension of Lie's term up for consideration.

Russia's action today in calling a new meeting of the Council may delay consideration of extending Lie's term. But if the Council session results in another deadlock—and this is expected—the question could still go before the Assembly as scheduled.

Today was the second time Russia's Jacob A. Malik asked, at the last minute, for another Council meeting on Lie. There was no word from the Russians as to what Malik might propose. Malik was not available for comment.

Legal experts say the Assembly can extend an incumbent's term, when the Council fails to submit a new name, but it cannot elect someone new without a Council recommendation.

Austin implied last Wednesday that the United States would cast its first veto, if necessary, to keep the job from going to anyone but Lie. Russia has already vetoed the Norwegian.

The 14-nation resolution on Lie calls for an extension of the Norwegian's term by three years. The list of sponsors includes Canada, Cuba, Ecuador, France, Greece, India, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Norway, Pakistan, the Philippines, Britain, and Yugoslavia.

Observers were especially interested by the presence of India on the list. They speculated that this sudden shift to outright support of the West might be the first result of Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru's anger over the reported Chinese Communist invasion of Tibet.

8 Russians Taken In Pyongyang Are Anti-Soviet

PYONGYANG, Korea, (Monday) Oct. 30 (U.P.).—Eight Russian civilians who never want to see Russia again have been rounded up in Pyongyang within the past five days and are being held in protective custody, military police said today.

Included are five men and three women. All told American officers they did not want to return to Russia under any circumstances. The Americans said there was no evidence to indicate that any of the eight had been connected with the Russian advisory group in North Korea.

First Lieut. Joseph E. Stanley, of Aberdeen, Md., said the Russians are being held "merely for their own protection."

One of the Russians, Vladimir Levy, 43, said there were about 1000 Soviet officers stationed in Pyongyang alone. There were very few enlisted men, he said, adding that he had seen only 10 or 12.

Other Russians were stationed in every city and town in North Korea, he said.

"They ran everything—industry agriculture, trading—everything," Levy said.

Red Force Of 10,000 Attacks on Yank Flank

Third of Division Lost in Three Days; Americans Rushed To Aid of Ally

SEOUL, Oct. 30 (AP).—The South Korean Sixth Division, one-third of its men lost in combat with fiercely fighting Reds, retreated in disorder today in northwest Korea.

American tanks and artillery rushed up to help stop more than 10,000 Reds, reported to include some Chinese Communists.

The first sizeable defeat in weeks by United Nations forces occurred at Onjong on the right flank of an American column which today rolled within 35 miles of the Manchurian border.

The reverse caused the Seventh Regiment of the Sixth Division, which had reached the Manchurian border Thursday above Chosan, to pull back more than 30 miles. It was menaced by Red concentrations at its rear.

A Red force which South Korean commanders said was led by Chinese Communist officers captured Onjong Thursday. The defending Second Regiment of the South Korean Sixth Division was surrounded. The bulk of it was wiped out. Survivors who broke out were split and scattered.

The Nineteenth Regiment of the Sixth Division was hard hit Friday and Saturday trying to relieve the Second. The Tenth Regiment of the South Korean Eighth Division also took a severe drubbing while trying to give support.

The United States push toward the border by the Fifth Regiment of the Twenty-fourth Division rolled 10 miles northwest of Taechon to within 33 miles of the Yalu River separating Korea and Manchuria.

On the American left flank, the British Commonwealth Twenty-seventh Brigade was stopped Sunday less than a mile short of Chongju by a demolished river bridge.

Reports continued to pour in of destroyed Red tanks in this sector.

The British brigade reported that its guns and supporting fighter bombers knocked out six tanks. A United States First Army Corps spokesman said fighter bombers supporting the American drive beyond Taechon knocked out 12 and also six self-propelled guns.

At least six South Korean divisions and three American divisions—swelled by new amphibious landings on the east coast—and the brigade of British troops were taking part in a giant drive toward the Manchurian border.

Their combined forces numbered more than 110,000 men. Farther back, if needed, the Allied command had an estimated 90,000 additional troops.

A Tokyo headquarters spokesman estimated the North Koreans had no more than 37,000 effectives left throughout Korea.

These Reds were making desperate rear-guard stands and behind-the-line forays. They ap-

Fire-Chasing Youth Held Under Old Law

Bothered for years by automobiles chasing fire engines, Arlington police yesterday invoked an old, little-used ordinance against an 18-year-old Washington-Lee High School senior.

They charged James H. Richardson, of 4845 Rock Spring rd., with "following fire equipment too closely," under provisions of an old ordinance.

Police said Richardson was arrested as he pulled up behind Ballston Fire Department equipment near 700 N. Wayne st., where a small fire in the kitchen was in progress.

John Paul Jones, an Arlington attorney who is also head of the county firemen's association, said firemen have been at their wits' end to shoo off the unwanted escorts.

"They block off traffic, they interfere with apparatus, they slow up our getting into burning buildings," complained Jones.

"We've tried every way possible to stop it," he added.

Police called Jones over to see whether the youth was a volunteer fireman coming in on his own. Some of the volunteers report to fires that way, Jones said. Richardson wasn't one of them.

Asked why he had followed the engines, Jones said the youth replied: "Everyone else does it."

Police ordered Richardson to report to Arlington Police Court November 1.

Reconciliation on the Half-Shell

Democrats Cheer as Oysters Unite Gov. Lane and Mahoney

BALTIMORE, Oct. 29 (AP).—Governor Lane and George P. Mahoney smiled and chatted together over oysters on the half-shell today.

This could be the biggest political news since the primary election. It could mean the two candidates who conducted one of the bitterest campaigns for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination in recent years have made peace.

Lane won the nomination under Maryland's unit vote system, but the Baltimore contractor polled the majority of votes.

The crowd at the oyster roast—sponsored by the Fourth Congressional District Democrats—spotted the jovialness of the two. The result was a loud roar of approval.

Mahoney had arrived at the roast early. Lane came later. When the Governor's party reached the place where Mahoney stood, one of them said:

"George, the Governor is hungry. How about having some oysters with him?"

Both Mahoney and Lane laughed and moved toward the oyster bar, where they chatted for some time. And that was where the crowd got the idea.

The two met and shook hands last week at a banquet of the United Democratic Women's Clubs of Maryland, but this meeting apparently was not planned and was much more informal.

Reported Well Inside Tibet

Red Force Expected to Launch 3-Pronged Drive to Take Lhasa

CALCUTTA, India, Oct. 29 (AP). The Kalimpong correspondent for the newspaper Statesman said today that Chinese Comunists who launched an attack on Tibet Tuesday are now well into that mountainous country and are expected to aim a three-pronged drive on Lhasa, Tibetan capital.

The invaders were reported well beyond the Yangtze River. China has never formally recognized the river as the boundary line with Tibet, although a 1914 convention participated in by China, Tibet and Britain fixed the Yangtze as the boundary. China did not ratify the convention.

The Kalimpong correspondent gave this picture of the reported invasion:

The Chinese appeared to be concentrated at Tentsin (Atunze), in southeast Tibet, about 460 miles from Lhasa; and at Yushu (Jyekundo), their base in the Chinese Province of Tsinghai about 400 miles northeast of Lhasa.

Advance Red units were reported in 15,000-foot Dongma Pass, about 360 miles northeast of Lhasa.

The Reds are expected to develop an attack from Lushu and Nagchuka toward Lhasa, considered the easiest route toward the Tibetan capital; from Yushu and Rimoche toward Lhasa; and from Drya, southeastern Tibet, toward Lhasa.

U.S., Britain to Curb Soviet 'War' Trade

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

American negotiations with the British and French governments are now under way in London to effect a sharp tightening up of shipments to the Iron Curtain of goods of potential military value.

It was learned that these negotiations are the result of an agreement reached by Secretary of State Acheson earlier this month at the Big Three Foreign Ministers meetings in New York.

At that time, Acheson brought to the attention of Britain's Ernest Bevin and France's Robert Schuman, the growing American conviction in Congress, the public and some parts of the Administration that European nations could and should do more to restrict their shipments to eastern Europe.

Replies Satisfactory

Acheson told them, it was learned, that the present situation was unsatisfactory and that something had to be done to effect a substantial curtailment of western European shipments to the Soviet bloc of what Americans considered strategically important goods.

The assurance thereupon given by Bevin and Schuman, it is reported, were considered satisfactory by Acheson and constitute a major forward step.

The current negotiations in London followed. They are, by the nature of the subject, secret. The only official comment to be had on them from the State Department is that French, British and American experts are considering "certain of the economic aspects of defense."

Some Already Barred

Through earlier agreements, the Marshall Plan nations have long since barred the export to the Soviet bloc of about 90 percent of the articles on a basic American embargo list. These consist not only of munitions but of raw materials and manufactured goods that have primarily military uses.

Nevertheless, the Marshall Plan countries have not agreed to any great extent on limiting shipments on a second American list, containing items of less direct military application, but where the importance rests in quantities involved.

The belief that the western European nations were making too little progress in cutting back exports of military value to the East found its legislative expression earlier this fall in the so-called Wherry amendment to the omnibus appropriation bill.

That amendment would have forbidden American aid to any nation which shipped eastward materials of strategic value. This provision, so rigid, would have made operations by the Economic Cooperation Administration virtually impossible.

Sanctions No Solution

As a compromise, an Administration substitute was enacted, allowing more administrative flexibility. It stands as clear evidence of congressional intent that such exports to the Soviet bloc must be drastically limited.

Except for an extreme and virtually lunatic fringe, no one expects this can be done by the application of sanctions by the United States—the withholding of ECA aid to a nation that does not conform 100 percent, for example.

For the nature of the problem is such that:

1. There can never be complete uniformity and agreement on the items or the quantities to be embargoed. For example, is mining machinery of military utility to the East, or is it wise to ship it to Poland to raise production of coal which the Western nations would like to purchase?

2. The desired embargoes can never be obtained by forcing them on the Marshall Plan nations. They can be executed only if the nation concerned really wants to apply them.

Case of Germany

The situation in Germany is a case in point. During the Hitler days, Germany had an almost completely efficient export control apparatus. Yet when an embargo was forced on Germany by the Allied High Command, against the Germans' will, that area's record of enforcement of the ban was the worst in Europe.

Accordingly, it is generally agreed that the Marshall Plan nations must be induced to apply the restrictions in the feeling that it is in their own interest to do so.

The question in some quarters of the American Government has been, however, how vigorously have ECA and State Department negotiators attempted to persuade the Europeans of this point?

Commercial interests in Europe, of course, are eager to trade with the Eastern countries. Western governments themselves have also been anxious to build as large an export trade as possible, in order to be able to buy necessary—and also military useful—raw materials and other products from the East.

Proposals for Mending Ways

But many American experts believe that the Marshall Plan countries have been somewhat less than discriminating in how they conducted their trade. They propose that those nations mend their ways in these respects:

1. They should ban shipments to the Eastern countries of items that amount now to roughly 25 percent of their current exports.

2. They could offset a good part of this cancellation by substituting other, less strategic, exports which the East would probably buy.

3. They should not send to the Soviet area those products which the United States embargoes to the East, but which the United States itself has had to supply in the past to the Western countries.

4. They should adopt, in general, the American criteria of what constitutes strategic items. In addition to prohibition of outright munitions, where there is no argument, the American rule of thumb calls for the banning of products of advanced scientific and technical development.

Some Concrete Steps

In addition to the agreement in principle which Acheson secured from Bevin and Schuman, there have been some concrete steps toward tightening up.

Britain has already determined to suspend future shipments of machine tools, even though they were stipulated in trade agreements as the payment for Eastern grain and other foods, already furnished.

Furthermore, it is certain that much of the remaining problem will be cured by the Western European defense effort itself. Whatever commercial pressures there are to export to the East, the need for home use in the expanded rearmament program will serve to cut down or eliminate entirely shipments to the Iron Curtain of strategic goods.

American officials believe that if the London negotiations with the British and French are successful, other nations in the Marshall Plan will follow suit. A combination of agreement and rearmament pressures at home, it is hoped, will serve to effect the desired curtailment of Iron Curtain-bound exports.

French Firm on Plan For European Army

Vexes Ministers

German Role In Defense Top Problem

By The Associated Press

The vexing question of German participation in the proposed European defense force appeared last night to overshadow other prime problems of the Atlantic powers' military meeting—including final action on a supreme commander.

A Sunday recess provided opportunity for the representatives at the North Atlantic Treaty Organization's defense committee to make interim reports to their governments on what was—and wasn't—accoplished at the first session and to get guidance for today's session.

The French delegation was in the spotlight. M. Moch, French defense minister, presented to his 11 colleagues of the committee Saturday his government's views about use of West Germans in the mutual military force to be assembled for protection against any Russian aggression. This stand presumably was offered as a substitute for a plan developed by the permanent standing committee of the NATO military organization and which reflected substantially the ideas of the United States and Britain.

France Wary of Germans

It has been the thought of the United States and Britain that free Western Germany should contribute to the combined defense force units up to the size of army divisions. There would be guarantees that control of these divisions would remain out of the hands of the West German government and in the hands of the other European powers. Limits would be fixed on the proportion of German troops in the Allied forces.

But France, looking back on her previous experiences with Germany, subscribes to but little of this general idea. She doesn't want anything as big as German divisions. France wants whatever Germans are to be used to be only small components of a supra national organization (embracing forces of more than one nation). And before any of this is done, it wants a European defense council to be formed, of which the supra national defense force would be an agency.

Primarily because of differing views about the military practicability of having only small units instead of divisions of Germans used, and because they feel long delay might arise out of setting up the French proposal, the United States and Britain are pressing for their plan.

Until the first meeting of the defense ministers Saturday there had been universal impression that the committee would go through the formality of setting up a supreme headquarters for integrated European force and designating the United States as the country to provide the supreme commander.

But it developed that this wasn't done. Instead much of the day seemed to have devoted to deciding on non-controversial points of the agenda—and to talking about the German question.

Accord on Eisenhower

All the European members of the Atlantic organization reportedly were in accord even before the current sessions that the United States should provide a supreme commander and that Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower was the favored man. But, though there had been no known disagreement about the supreme commander question and Eisenhower talked with President Truman Saturday morning, the matter still hung fire in the defense committee.

Estimates have been made that the total force for protection of western Europe might be from 50 to 80 divisions of army troops, together with contributions of air and naval forces by the member nations.

To this force, the United States might eventually contribute between 5 and 10 divisions.

But it is quite possible the States now feels that, before it pledges a specific number, it should have some assurance about whether there will be German forces also. If the French plan is to prevail and there are to be no German units of division size, that can make a difference in the American contribution. If there are to be eight or ten German divisions (as some of the earlier talk indicated) that, too, could affect the American army contribution.

LYON, France, Oct. 29 (AP).—Premier Rene Pleven stood firm behind France's plan for a European army, saying bluntly it was not a "dilatory maneuver."

"Only a European army under European control can guarantee to us that the reconstitution of a strong German army will not drag us some day into a crusade or war of revenge that we do not want at any price," he said in a speech here.

The French Parliament last Thursday approved the plan for a supranational army by a vote of 349 to 235. Pleven's middle-road coalition government had announced the plan as the only way France would agree to rearm Western Germany. France's Western allies have thus far reacted coolly to the plan.

Addressing a party congress of his own left-of-center Democratic Socialist Resistance Union, Pleven said: "You know that every European people must take its share of the necessary common (defense) effort. We do not deny that the federal republic of (Western) Germany must assume its share, too.

"You know the position the French government has just taken regarding this important problem. There must be no misunderstanding. The proposal we made to constitute a European army is for us neither a dilatory maneuver nor a means of imposing permanently on the Federal Republic of Germany a sort of discrimination compared to other members of the European community which we must constitute."

He acknowledged the French plan for a European army had met "skepticism and misunderstanding," but added, "France owes it to herself to bring her ideas to a successful end."

Pleven said the "immense majority of French people have understood the lessons of the last two wars. They understand the solid organization of collective security is a protection infinitely more efficient that a Maginot Line or any other fortification."

He added the disparity between Soviet and satellite armed forces in Europe and those available to Western nations is a source of "mistrust, worry, suspicion and mystery."

Pleven said his government will shortly announce a finance project "absolutely apart from the national budget and which will assign certain resources to our supplementary effort for rearmament."

He added the plan will aim at maximum French contributions to collective Western security "without collapsing France's economic framework and lowering the living standards of her poorest citizens."

Atlantic Pact Policy Unit Is Advocated

Ten former military leaders, headed by former War Secretary Robert P. Patterson, yesterday urged creation of a single defense and foreign relations departments to direct Atlantic Pact policy.

In a statement to Defense Secretary Marshall, they praised representatives of the 12 Atlantic Pact nations for their "integrated blueprint for the defense of the Atlantic community." But, they warned, "in a war between blueprints and troops, the troops will win."

The 10 leaders pointed out that the Soviet aim of world conquest already had advanced "to the point where Russia controls the central land mass of the world." To counter this, they said, the 12 pact nations have set up "a 12-headed council with power to recommend."

"The problem of continuing Communist aggression is worldwide," their statement declared. "It involves not only the Atlantic, but the Pacific. The answer is not an international but rather a supernational armed force. The democracies need not 12 departments of defense and 12 departments of foreign affairs, but one. They need it now."

In addition to Patterson, the statement was signed by Maj. Gen. John R. Deane (ret.), former head of the wartime military mission to Russia; Mrs. Oveta Culp Hobby, first director of the Women's Army Corps; Adm. Andrew C. Bennett (ret.), Stephen F. Chadwick, past national commander of the American Legion; Gen. William H. Draper, former Undersecretary of War; J. E. Martie, national vice commander of the American Legion; Maj. Gen. G. Ralph Meyer (ret.), Adm. H. W. Yarnell (ret.), and John Nicholas Brown, former Undersecretary of the Navy.

Girl, 8, Once Polio Victim, Learns to Swim Through 'Y'

by Jack Lartz—The Washington Post

VICTIM OF POLIO at 3½ years, Judy Mayfield, 8, of 4413 Klingle rd. nw., learned to swim at the YWCA, 17th and K sts. nw., a Community Chest-sponsored organization. When she started lessons three months ago, Judy had to be supported by her instructor while walking through the water. When 5 years old, she was hospitalized for surgery and was unable to walk for a year and a half

While other youngsters were being dunked in baby pools and learning to duck paddle on their own, little Judy Mayfield was lying on her back, a victim of polio.

That was five years ago in Oakland, Calif.

A victim of poliomylitis at 3, the 8-year-old daughter of Attorney Frank M. Mayfield of 4413 Klingle rd. nw., now is a hardy-looking, chubby 80-pounder.

For over a year after her attack, she was unable to walk. In the hospital undergoing surgical operations, and in a plaster cast for eight months, Judy's parents had her take every type of physiotherapy treatment known.

Perky-eyed Judy with her pumpkin-toothed smile, started three months ago to learn to swim—a sport denied her by her ailment.

It meant learning an entirely new medium of action.

The YWCA, a Community Chest supported agency, provided an expert instructor in Miss Florence Morris, swimming teacher there for 10 years.

She worked with her three days a week in private lessons, experimenting with all strokes, trying for rhythm, balance and coordination of the legs and arms.

Unable at first even to stand up in the water, Judy would hold tightly to Miss Morris' extended hands and let herself be guided through the shallow end of the pool.

"Her natural buoyancy helped and she finally mastered the crawl with the aid of water wings and inflated rubber tires," Miss Morris said.

Now she is doing widths of the pool in backstroke, sidestroke and the crawl.

Before starting back to the fourth grade at Horace Mann School, she could even manage a shallow dive.

Jones Twins Home Again

his stomach walls and his right ribs.

Charlie had the marks of two slivers on his knee, won in the Seoul street fighting, and a wrenched back, memento of a combat parachute jump above Pyongyang.

They had loved to "shoot" District firemen straining against a blaze. And they had gone to Korea, specificically to "shoot guys with dirty faces," for NBC television.

And the biggest gripe they had about the Korean war were the military press liaison men who tried to keep them back.

"The PIO's were worse than the North Koreans," Gene said. "They thought you had to cover a war from a book. They wanted you to sit back at headquarters and talk to the generals. Me and Charlie would never have got separated if not for them."

Don't Like Separation

Gene and Charlie hate to get separated, anywhere. They had hit the Korean war together when the United Nations forces were pulling out of Yongdong. Every night, they slept "10 miles further back than the night before."

Five days before D-day at Inchon, they were notified but, in the legendary Jones manner, skeptical. "We thought it would be a slaughter."

So, naturally, they arranged to get in on it. There was a parachute jump on Seoul's Kimpo airfield scheduled to coincide with the invasion, and Charlie went to Japan for that, while Gene joined the first wave, the Second Battalion of the Fifth Marines.

The first wave was pinned down for the first few minutes on that September 15 day. Then it got orders to crawl forward. The mortar fire was skimming through the air 2 feet above the ground. You had to crawl.

No Perspective

But Gene Jones couldn't get any "perspective shooting on his stomach," so he stood up, made some pictures, and took a mortar shell in his right side. And spent the next three and a half weeks in a hospital ship off Inchon, critically wounded. It all took 40 minutes.

The parachute jump phizzed out, and disappointed Charlie Jones hitchhiked in a Navy PBY to the Inchon beachhead the next day. The first mutual friend he met told him Gene had been killed.

Frantic, Charlie made his way to the ship, found some but not much relief at the sight of his brother. Gene was looking awful, "all rigged up with plasma and oxygen."

Less than a month later, during which time Charlie had shot some of the best pictures of the war while inching toward Seoul with a Marine company, Charlie sneaked some clothes aboard the ship, and Gene "escaped."

Back at the beach, they flew to Tokyo, hooked onto a British outfit moving on Pyongyang. Five days of that and Gene, with shrapnel still in him, and Charlie, his knee barely heeled, were calling Tokyo.

They get clearance to make that parachute jump above Pyongyang, in that futile effort to save 4000 war prisoners.

The jump didn't bother Gene, but Charlie collided with two paratroopers on the way down, blistered his hands trying to unsnafu, and wrenched his shoulder when he landed.

That did it, as far as the Jones boys were concerned. "Most of the guys covering the war were heading for Indo-China, and there yas nothing left there but gureilla fighting." So they came home.

Poland Bases Zloty on Gold; Its Value Soars

WARSAW, Oct. 29 (AP).—The Polish Parliament (Sejm) last night unanimously adopted a new law putting the Nation's currency on the gold standard and hiking its value a hundredfold.

Warsaw radio said the Polish zloty now will be worth 0.222168 grams of pure gold, putting it on a par with the Russian ruble. Officially, this increases the value of the zloty from 0.0025 dollars to 25 cents in terms of American currency.

Finance Minister Konstanty Dabrowski, explaining the new measure to Parliament yesterday, said the new zloty will have value in capitalist and other countries, whereas the old one was worthless. He said the revaluation would aid Poland's fight against the black market and speculators and also assist in fulfilling the nation's six-year plan.

Warsay radio said that beginning Monday 100 old zlotys in cash will be exchanged for one new one, but that wages and shop prices will be calculated at three new zlotys to 100 old ones. The exchange may be made at banks up to November 8. The broadcast warned personnel of state banks, cooperatives and other administrative units to report for duty today to prepare for the coming exchange.

Resistance Unit Asks U. N. Indo-China Action

HONGKONG, Oct. 29 (AP).—A self-styled resistance group pledged to support "neither communism nor colonialism," has asked for the backing of a United Nations "good offices committee" in troubled Indo-China.

Trinh Hung Ngau, secretary-general of the group, today said proposals were mailed October 24 to the U. N. General Assembly and Security Council, asking:

That a "good offices committee" give full independence to Viet Nam, Cambodia and Laos.

That French troops be withdrawn in favor of a national Viet Namese army.

That the U. N. issue a general cease-fire order.

That the civil administration of Indo-China be handled temporarily under the "plenipotentiary" of Bao Dai, French-supported Emperor of Viet Nam, and the respective heads of Cambodia and Laos, but with the over-all supervision of exiled Crown Prince Cuong De.

At Lake Success, United Nations officials said they had not yet received any letter from the group.

Sen. McCarthy To Address GOP Rally Tonight

Senator Joseph R. McCarthy (R., Wis.) will speak at a Republican rally at the Statler Hotel at 8 tonight. The rally is sponsored by the District Republican Club.

McCarthy is expected to discuss work of the Senate Subcommittee, headed by Senator Millard E. Tydings (D., Md.). The Democratic majority of the five-member group reported to the Senate that charges advanced by McCarthy about subversives in the State Department were a "fraud and a hoax."

The speech will be broadcast over WOL in Washington, WCBM in Baltimore, and WDYK in Cumberland, and over the Liberty Radio Network.

Political Big Guns Concentrating Fire Power On Maryland Suburban Voters This Week

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

Baltimore still may turn the wheels of Maryland politics but the candidates are finding some important gears in Montgomery and Prince Georges counties.

And in an election where the politicians still are guessing, and even the weather could be a factor, the candidates are lavishing special attention on the Maryland suburbs of the Nation's Capital.

Today brings a big highlight in the final week of campaign bidding for votes of Prince Georges County. It will be a confrontation meeting between the two Congressional candidates and several county candidates of the bitterly contending Prince Georges Democratic and Republican parties.

May Avoid Ticklish Subject

The meeting will be held in the Maryland Room of the Home Economics of the University of Maryland, starting at 8 p. m.

Representative Lansdale G. Sasscer (D., Md.), candidate for re-election to the Fifth District House seat, and Thomas S. Carr, of Annapolis, Republican candidate for the same office, each will have 10 minutes to bid for votes.

Interest centers on the question of whether they will talk about county crime, and chances are they may avoid the subject.

Carr last week took up the cry of some Prince Georges county candidates that the county was machine-dominated, and crime and gambling were rampant. He said Sasscer was an estimable man who closed his eyes to the conditions.

Sasscer retorted that he did now know of any rampant crime in the county, said that he was not an inforcement officer himself, and suggested that Carr was trying to get a policeman's badge and whistle rather than understand the duties of the Congressional office.

Doesn't Doubt His Integrity

Carr late in the week issued a statement—after the two had traded cracks about hokum and baloney—saying he had not intended to attack Sasscer's integrity. Carr said:

"My statement was clearly pointed at the fact the gambling has been prevalent in Prince Georges county and proper enforcement has not been instituted by authorities.

"In no way did I even remotely imply that Mr. Sasser was or ever had been connected with such operations.

"I'm sincerely sorry that this statement was mis-interpreted because I doubt that anyone can fairly attack the character of a man who has served this district openly and as long as Mr. Sasser has.

"In conclusion I want to point out that on no less than a dozen different occasions in recent campaign speeches I have referred to Mr. Sasscer as my worthy opponent, a loyal servant of the people who has been forced to go along with the administration. On those occasions I stated publicly that I did not intend any remarks made by me to be considered an attack on Mr. Sasscer as a person.

Esteems His Highly

"I do not believe in political mud slinging. I want no part of it. Mr. Sasscer has conducted this campaign on a fair gentlemanly basis, which is the only way a man of his stature would conduct himself and I want it known I have only the greatest respect for him as a person. Because of this unfortunate misunderstanding I shall use this release at every public opportunity I have between now and election day."

Tonight's meeting is sponsored by the League of Women Voters, the County Civic Federation, and the Committee for Good Government in Prince Georges County. Besides Sasscer and Carr, the speakers will include: (Democrats) L. Harold Sothoron, seeking re-election to the State Senate; Perry O. Wilkinson, seeking re-election to the House of Delegates, and Harry W. McNamee, seeking re-election to the board of county commissioners; and (Republicans) John Raymond Fletcher, candidate for State Senate; John F. Lillard, jr., candidate for the Maryland House, and N. Wilson Spicknall, candidate for the county board.

Butler to Talk in Montgomery

In Montgomery County, John Marshall Butler is to be the featured speaker in a "Beat Tydings" rally at 8 p.m. Wednesday in the Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School. Butler is the GOP candidate for the seat held for four terms by United States Senator Millard E. Tydings (D., Md.)

The Democrats are bringing Senator Herbert R. O'Conor (D., Md.) into Montgomery for a final county-wide rally Thursday night at 8 p.m. in the Silver Spring Armory.

GOP forces in Prince Georges have hit as a "smoke screen" and protested as inadequate the law sponsored by Senator Sothoron for revisions in the county government. Three main provisions of the law are to take effect after the election: (1) for one full-time commissioner, (2) for two board meetings instead of one each week and (3) for a substantial increase in board members' salaries.

GOP candidates in Prince Georges have indorsed the idea of an independent survey of the county government, a move that was forestalled by the Sothoron law. The GOP also wants the Sotheron law repealed and a county-manager setup installed.

Similar drives toward modernization and a larger measure of home rule in local government are reflected in the current campaign in Montgomery County. The Republicans who played a major share in installing a council-manager form of government two years ago are urging voters to support them and keep the Democrats out of a chance to tamper with it.

Montgomery Republicans are also urging election of another GOP delegation to the State Legislature to keep the fight for increased county control over agencies of local government that now look more to Annapolis for guidance.

Democrats privately say they believe the main political force of the charter movement now is spent, that its precinct organization has fallen apart and that the time is ripe to carry the county for the State and local Democratic tickets.

Everything at Steak!

By Albert Parchey Mesirow

"GORGEOUS GUSSIE" MORAN, the tennis cutie, who is scheduled to perform in Washington this week, is a woman upon whom Fate has smiled most indulgently. An inspired London designer, acting on a sudden impulse, added an inch of lace to the bottom of the panties of her tennis costume and thereby catapulted her from the status of an earnest but mediocre tennis player to dizzy pinnacles of riches. History is replete with such examples of Fate's whimsy. But search as you may, you will find the names of no restaurateurs who have suddenly achieved great wealth. Yet think not that the lot of the restaurateur is an unkind one. An all-wise Providence has seen to it that the man who satisfies the wholesome appetites of his fellows with fine foods and sound wines, enjoys spiritual rewards far beyond anything the likes of Gorgeous Gussie, with all her shiny dollars, will ever know! Lest I be accused of being jealous, let me assure you that I am not. After all, my game is golf, not tennis!

While you are sighing (or ranting, whichever is your custom) over the high cost of living in these days of soaring prices, remember the poor cabbie, who has had no raise in fares since 1942. He needs, for the necessities of life, twice as much as you would ordinarily tip him.

I wonder how many Virginians order Smithfield ham solely out of patriotism? Certainly there can be no valid comparison between this hot-house darling and the husky young Iowa porker! The Smithfield boar is fed, I am told, peanuts for fattening and violets to make his flesh fine in texture. (His ears, no doubt, become silken purses!) Bosh! The Iowa breed is a breed of pigs, not orchids. Iowa pigs grow healthy in the sun and outdoors air. They wax fat on the abundant, golden corn for which their native State is so justly famous. Any pampering they get comes in the curing of their hams. These magnificent hunks of meat are first smoked over a rich hickory fire. Then they're cured in cane sugar and sorghum. The resulting flavor is rich, fulsome and robust, as ham should be. And the texture of the meat is hammy. We get our hams straight from Dubuque. We bake them in our own ovens, first studding each with cloves. No fancy glazing; no glaced fruits. But when the rich, pink flesh is done to a turn, we cut it into slices five-eighths of an inch thick, pile the platter high with golden French fried potatoes and whisk it to your place, accompanied by a dish of Chef Wilbur Smith's incomparable cole slaw, the famous Parchey roll basket, butter and your favorite beverage. It's a dish much too good for a King, fit only for a red-blooded man with an outdoor appetite! And it costs but a dollar thirty-five. Come in and ask for our Iowa ham platter. It's really wonderful! This succulent oyster stew, which is prepared only on order (we don't shell the oysters until you ask for it) is yours . . . a steaming tureen full . . . for just sixty-five cents. Can you think of a finer mid-day repast? For Action

'Reds' Board To Organize This Week

By the United Press

Seth W. Richardson, chairman of the new Communist control board, said yesterday his group will be ready for action this week and will "let the chips fall where they may" in trying to enforce congressional curbs on American Reds and their followers.

He said he has no idea whether the Communist registration provisions of the new Red-control law will work, but agreed to take the key post because of "curiosity" on that score.

Describing himself as a "referee in a prizefight," he said that if Congress' findings against Communists are correct and registration will cure the situation, the result will be "good." But he said it will be necessary to prove that Communists are a "menace" to the Government.

Richardson, a tall, lanky Republican of 70, discussed his new job in an interview. He has been head of President Truman's loyalty review board, a post he will leave while serving on the new agency.

The President, who vetoed the measure as unworkable but said he'd enforce it when Congress overrode him, named Richardson, two other Republicans and two Democrats to the board. It will decide whether organizations considered Communist or Communist "fronts" by the Attorney General must register under the law.

Curious About Workability

All five nominations will go before the Senate for confirmation when Congress returns next month. Richardson said the board has no money to operate with, and will ask Congress for funds as soon as the lawmakers get back.

Asked whether he approved of the Communist registration sections of the new law, Richardson replied:

"Finding out whether I approve is the fishhook that got me into this. Curiosity as to whether enforcement will demonstrate its workability is the interesting thing in the picture.

"I have friends in Congress and in the Administration who think both ways. I am exactly like a referee in a prize fight."

The Justice Department will act first to force the Communist Party to register. After completing the case against it, the department will move on to splinter groups.

Richardson said he believed Attorney General J. Howard McGrath would want to act first on the party because "if the spring water is not poisoned, the water flowing from it is not poisoned."

Board Meets Wednesday

Richardson said the board will meet to organize Wednesday and will be ready to start hearing cases "immediately." But he pointed out it first must receive a request from the Justice Department to order a group to register. The department is understood to be preparing its case against the Communist Party for submission in the next couple of weeks.

Richardson said the board may be ready for its first public hearings by December 1.

He did not see how the case against the Communist Party could take less time than the New York trial of Communists and the West Coast perjury trial of longshoremen's leader, Harry Bridges. The New York trial took nine months, Bridges' a little less than five months.

Richardson said the board's procedure under the new law, providing for public hearings and court review, offers "more protection" for organizations than the Attorney General's method of listing "subversive organizations" in connection with the loyalty program for Federal employes.

LAKE SUCCESS, N. Y., Oct. 29 (U.P.).—The problem of civil war fomented in the interests of a foreign power comes before the United Nations Monday in the continuation of a debate on a Soviet "peace plan."

Upon the insistence of Bolivia, six powers, including the United States and Britain, have revised their resolution before the main political committee to include a phrase that the General Assembly:

"Reaffirms that, whatever the weapons used, any aggression, whether committed openly or by fomenting civil strife in the interest of a foreign power, is the gravest of all crimes against peace and security throughout the world."

The amended resolution has been put forward as a counter-plan to the Soviet proposal.

The Russian plan, which faced almost certain defeat, calls for prohibition of the atom bomb, punishment of warmongers, a Big Five peace pact and—the key clause—reduction of the present armed forces of the Big Five by one third in the year 1950-51.

The new seven-power resolution, submitted by the Netherlands, proposes effective international control of atomic energy on the basis already approved by the General Assembly and regulation of all armaments and armed forces under a U. N. system of control and inspection "with a view to their gradual reduction."

It also calls for "prompt united action" against aggression.

Bolivia also inserted a clause that condemns the intervention of a state in the internal affairs of another for the purpose of forcibly changing the legally established government.

Meantime, dwindling anti-Franco delegates prepared for a last-ditch stand Monday against an eight-power resolution rescinding a four-year diplomatic ban against the Madrid government.

Poland planned to introduce a resolution calling upon the Assembly to reaffirm its 1946 resolution. Yugoslavia was expected to ask the special political committee to hear a representative of the Spanish Republican government-in-exile.

280 U. S. Workers Dismissed as Risks Since March, 1947

The Civil Service Commission reported yesterday that 280 Government employes have been fired as security risks since the Federal loyalty check program was begun in March, 1947.

In its monthly personnel report, the commissin also disclosed that the Defense Department added 44,600 civilians to its payroll during September to handle the re-armament program. Total Federal civilian employment reached 2,094,000.

In addition to the 280 fired outright, 1593 employes quit while under FBI investigation, 1171 quit before loyalty boards finished hearings, and 34 are still in the process of appeal or pending removal.

GOP Members Call Unit's Lobby Report 'Whitewash'

By the United Press

Republican members of the House Lobby Investigating Committee charged yesterday that the Democratic majority "whitewashed" left-wing and "fair deal" lobbyists and tried to "smear" business spokesman.

GOP members Charles A. Halleck (Ind.), Clarence J. Brown (Ohio), and Joseph P. O'Hara (Minn.) issued a minority report sharply attacking the findings of the majority group headed by Chairman Frank Buchanan (D., Pa.).

They said the majority report, issued October 21, was "clearly designed to help the leftists who are running for office on Administration tickets."

The majority report said 152 corporations spent $32,124,800 on lobbying between January 1, 1947, and June 1, 1950. While they found little indication of "corrupt" lobbying, the Democrats said it is obvious that "organized business" gains most from efforts to influence legislation.

The GOP members particularly criticized the Democrats for what they called a "whitewash" of the activities of Federal Security Administrator Oscar R. Ewing and Secretary of Agriculture Charles F. Brannan.

"The Democratic members of the committee regard the St. Paul, Minn., political rally for the Brannan plan, which cost the taxpayers approximately $100,000, as in the public interest, even though these funds were diverted illegally from monies appropriated for soil conservation programs—not for political activities," the Republican statement said.

(The committee report said the Comptroller General investigated Brannan's speech and found that all expenditures were proper.)

"In the same manner," the three Republicans continued, "the report approves the tax-financed junket by Oscar Ewing and his staff to advocate socialized medicine on a world stage."

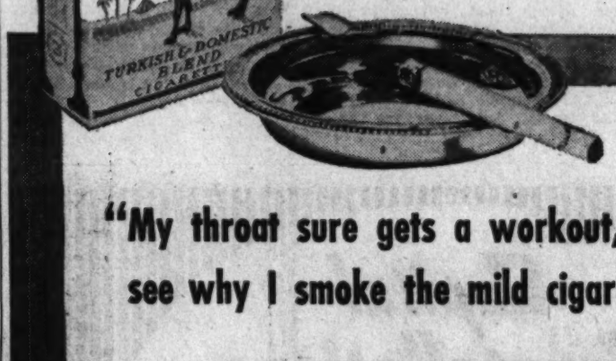
HOW MILD CAN A CIGARETTE BE?

NOTED THROAT SPECIALISTS REPORT ON 30-DAY TEST OF CAMEL SMOKERS...

Not one single case of throat irritation due to smoking CAMELS

Yes, these were the findings of noted throat specialists after a total of 2,470 weekly examinations of the throats of hundreds of men and women who smoked Camels—and only Camels—for 30 consecutive days.

R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., Winston-Salem, N. C.



"My throat sure gets a workout, so it's easy to see why I smoke the mild cigarette... CAMEL!"

PETER LIND HAYES
Star of stage and television

"MY DAILY schedule of shows and rehearsals puts a lot of strain on my voice—so mildness is very important to me. My cigarette is Camel. The 30-Day Mildness Test proved Camels agree with my throat!

"The 30-Day Camel Test is the sensible test, I might add. No tricks. I didn't have to decide on one puff or one sniff—a quick inhale or exhale. I took my time and enjoyed Camel's fine flavor day after day... for 30 days. And, believe me, I found out for sure just how mild and good tasting a cigarette can be! It's no wonder to me that more people smoke Camels than any other cigarette."

GIs Rush to Aid Retreating South Koreans

parently were trying to slow the Allied advance in a fight for time, now that winter is near.

Field dispatches from all fronts agreed that Red resistance was stiffening.

Associated Press Correspondent Ben Price reported from the east coast that it was reasonably certain now that the Communists are reorganizing cut-off units in hopes of major fighting next spring.

Column From Iwon Hits North

United Nations field forces, however, were making a strong effort to finish the war quickly and avoid protracted guerilla fighting in Korea's bitter winter.

The United States Seventh Division, with South Korean troops integrated into its ranks, sent a column pushing north from Iwon following an unopposed landing there Sunday morning.

The Seventh Division setup, with 27,000 troops and supplies, was 168 air miles southwest of the boundary of Korea and Soviet Siberia on the Sea of Japan. It was 40 miles below advanced columns of the South Korean Capital Division, which had previously reached the east coast port of Songjin.

Allied authorities explained the landing at Iwon—the second behind their own lines in four days—was to keep up with the time table for the U. N. push to the border. Six days' marching time was lost when the amphibious landing at Wonsan was held up by thickly planted Communist mines.

Maj. Gen. David Barr's Seventh Division troops unloaded on the Iwon beach by the light of jeeps and trucks. Sherman tanks were used to tow heavily laden trucks across the sand to the major coastal highway—only 70 yards from the point where landing ships disgorged men and equipment.

The Seventeenth Regimental Combat Team of the Seventh Division headed north while the unloading still was in full swing.

Elsewhere on the northeast coast, the Capital Division ran into a stiff fight from 200 entrenched Reds on the heights above Songjin, 100 miles northeast of Hamhung. A South Korean cavalry regiment had raced 20 miles along the coastal road from Tanchon to break into Songjin, brushing aside the first resistance it met. The fighting developed after entry into the port city.

Gunfire from United States vessels offshore and air strikes by Marine and Navy planes supported the South Koreans.

Reservoir Scene of Battle

Inland, the South Korean Third Division had a fight on its hands in a battle for the Chosin reservoir, less than 48 miles northwest of Hamhung. The South Koreans made no progress Sunday, Tenth Corps headquarters reported.

Thirty miles south of Wonsan, and far behind the front, strongly reinforced Marines occupied the burning town of Mojo after running into an ambush. A First Marine Division spokesman indicated no serious threats existed there, but the Reds were trying to slip around the rugged hills for a new attack from the north.

On the western rim of the front roaming Red forces stalled the South Korean drive for the Manchurian border, but American and British troops smashed ahead.

The United States Twenty-fourth Division sent its Fifth Regiment pounding 11 miles beyond Taechon on a primary highway leading to the frontier town of Sakchu, near the Yalu River. It is here that the highway passes over the rim of the big Suiho-Supong power dam into Communist Manchuria.

The veteran American outfit was within 37 miles of the border and meeting only scattered Communist resistance.

The Reds used tanks and self-propelled guns to try to stem the American drive, but lost nine tanks and four guns in the effort.

AP Correspondent Tom Lambert said air strikes knocked out six Red tanks, while United States tanks blasted two more and infantrymen bagged the remaining one.

The Fifth Regiment captured 89 prisoners Sunday, including two Chinese privates.

One Chinese prisoner said he was a member of the 115th Division of the 35th Corps of the 13th Chinese Red Army. The other Chinese identified his unit as the 117th Division of the 39th Corps.

Intelligence officers in Tokyo, however, continued to insist there still was no indication of open intervention by the Chinese Communists.

Three South Korean divisions were north of the Twenty-fourth Division and strung out over a 60-mile stretch of road between Unsan and the border town of Chosan, where advanced South Korean elements held a precarious toe-hold at the frontier.

One of these, the Sixth Division, was forced in a disorderly retreat in the Onjong-Unsan area.

The South Korean First Division was northeast and northwest of Unsan, where it repulsed two Red counterattacks.

The Eighth Division reached Onjong, 50 miles southeast of Chosan, in an area where Chinese Reds were reported in undetermined numbers.

The South Korean Seventh Division approached Taechon as the United States Twenty-fourth Division continued its advance through that important road junction.

On the Twenty-fourth Division's left flank, British, Scottish and Australian troops of the Commonwealth's Twenty-seventh Brigade was last reported pushing beyond Chongju, about 50 miles from the Manchurian border town of Sinuiju. Resistance against Commonwealth troops was reported decreasing Sunday, but the necessity of fording a stream slowed their advance.

To the south, United States First Cavalry troops flushed out more than 100 North Korean saboteurs in the occupied port of Chinnampo, 27 miles from Pyongyang. Intelligence sources said these Reds were under instructions to make their way south to Seoul and there assassinate as many U. N. and South Korean officials as they could.

A headquarters briefing officer in Tokyo estimated there were 14,000 North Korean stragglers operating south of the thirty-eighth parallel. He said a new North Korean unit, identified as the Nineteenth Railway Brigade, came into action Thursday, but there were no details on its location or outcome of the fighting.

The spokesman estimated total Korean Communist casualties in the war were now 333,000.

The United States Fifth Air Force gave the British brigade in the west and the South Koreans in the northeast close air support Sunday. There were no Night Intruder missions for the second straight night, while B-29 bombers idled for the fourth consecutive day.

JUST 35 MILES AWAY—Arrows indicate main U. N. drives toward the Manchurian border. On the west coast (A) British Commonwealth units drove beyond Chongju while Americans pushed through Taechon to a point 35 miles from the border. Between them and Chosan (B), where South Koreans have a toe-hold on the frontier, the Korean Reds are making desperate rear-guard stands. South Koreans were hurled back in the Onjong-Unsan area (broken line) and United States tanks went to their aid. On the east coast the United States Seventh Division landed at Iwon (C) and started north to join South Koreans in Songjin and Pungsan. U. S. Bans Lubricant Cargoes to Red China

The Commerce Department yesterday clamped down on petroleum jelly exports to Red China, a move which caught the freighter Flying Cloud in the midst of loading at East Coast ports.

When the Flying Cloud touched at Philadelphia after taking on 66 tons of petroleum at Baltimore, customs officials prevented loading an additional 16,000 gallons waiting at the dock. At New York, where 21,000 more gallons were to have been loaded on the ship's arrival, it was expected even the Baltimore shipment would be taken off.

In addition to the petroleum withheld at Philadelphia, it was reported from there yesterday by the Associated Press that petroleum jelly and an undesignated quantity of scrap rubber had been removed from the vessel. From Wilmington, Del., the United Press quoted the Flying Cloud's skipper, Capt. Fred H. Rylander, as denying any petrolatum had been removed at Philadelphia. He was not reported to have mentioned scrap rubber.

The Flying Cloud, fired on last year by Nationalist Chinese war vessels, has been carrying on regular trade with two Communist Chinese ports despite the Nationalist blockade. She is owned by the Isbrandtsen Line which, a Commerce spokesman said, agreed to stop petrolatum exports when it was pointed out that it might serve a military purpose.

While commonly used for medicinal purposes, the spokesman said petrolatum is a not-too-efficient substitute for lubricating oil. Since exports of such oil to China were banned, he said, orders for petrolatum had been increased greatly. As a medicinal product, it needed no export license, but the great increase in orders moved an official of the Office of International Trade to say:

"It just looked like too much of the stuff for the Chinese Communists to be swallowing or rubbing on themselves. . . . It is apparent that our stoppage of lubricating oil shipments is pinching and they are looking for loopholes—even little ones like this."

Cotton Pickers Take $3.50 Pay Increase

The AFL National Farm Labor Union announced yesterday that a final settlement has been reached in a strike involving 20,000 California cotton pickers.

H. L. Mitchell, president, said the workers had won a wage increas of 50 cents a 100 pounds, equivalent to $1 a day for each worker.

A picking rate of $4 a 100 pounds originally was demanded by the union, but it accepted $3.50 offered by the California farm owners, Mitchell said.

He said the strike had lasted about three weeks in some areas, but that wherever the wage reached the $3.50 figure the union members returned to work.

Steel Wage Talks Resume Under Cloak of Secrecy

PITTSBURGH, Oct. 29 (AP).—Negotiators for the U. S. Steel Corp. and the CIO United Steelworkers get together for the third time Monday under a cloak of secrecy to try and iron out wage demands for nearly one million union members.

Following their second meeting last week on President Phil Murray's request for a "very healthy and substantial" raise for his men, who now average $1.70 an hour, he and U. S. Steel's John Stephens agreed to ban progress reports.

Such a ban, they declared, will "give the conference the best possible chance to find a basis for settlement."

Murray has refused to comment on reports he is asking a 25-cent-an-hour wage boost. U. S. Steel, which usually sets the pace for all the 1400 companies in basic steel, said it hasn't yet made a wage proposal.

Farm Equipment Union Maps Wage Campaign

DAVENPORT, Iowa, Oct. 29 (AP).—The Farm Equipment Council of the United Electrical Workers Union (Independent) today mapped a campaign for uniform wage standards.

A first step taken at the FE-UE convention was setting up conference boards with representation in various plants of the industry's large manufacturers. The boards are to formulate the council's wage policy in semi-annual meetings.

In the first FE-UE convention since the group was ousted from the CIO on charges of Communist domination, the delegates protested "the burdening of low-income families with excessive taxes which are eaten up in scandalous profiteering on war contracts."

RCA Reports Profits At Record $33,384,637

NEW YORK, Oct. 29 (AP).—The Radio Corp. of America today reported a record net profit of $33,384,637 for the first nine months of this year, exceeding any full year in the company's history.

The company, which claims to be the Nation's No. 1 television producer and manufactures a variety of other electronics products, said earnings applicable to common stock of last year amounted to $2.24 a share.

Talks Open Today On Farm Prospects

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

The food, clothing and shelter prospects for 1951, as to supply, quality and price, will be studied here this week at the year's most important agricultural meeting, the five-day Outlook conference of the Agriculture Department.

Already a dozen "Situation Reports" have been issued in advance of the five-day conference. Before the week is over the Nation's food and farm program will be thoroughly discussed, from the relationship between Agriculture and the National Defense, that starts the sessions today to Women in the Labor Force that will end them Friday.

Here are some of the advance highlights the Department has issued:

1. That prices received by farmers in the last month have dropped more than 1 percent. For the first time in nine months, the farm price of cotton has declined. The recent drop in hog prices, from 108 percent of parity in a month to 98 percent, forecasts early action by Agriculture Secretary Charles F. Brannan toward re-establishing price supports for hogs.

2. That wool prices, now at an all-time record high, will continue high this year, with a hint of early price controls on this commodity.

3. That the big supply of feed grains means another increase in the production of livestock and the Nation's meat supply. The report predicts a "third successive increase in aggregate livestock production." Prices of all classes of meat, the report forecasts, may be "moderately higher than in 1950" with the increased production overmatched by increased demand due to defense spending. "Any substantial rise would put meat animal prices in the range subject to control," the report warns.

4. In recent years, the Tobacco Situation states, cigarettes have used more domestic tobacco than all other uses, including export, combined. In 1950 it is estimated that a record quantity of 1.2 billion pounds, farm weight, will be used in cigarettes. Manufacture of smoking and chewing tobacco has fallen sharply below the level of the late 1930s and is only half the 1924-28 average.

5. The Demand and Price Situation predicts "a very strong demand for most farm products for 1951. Prices and incomes received by farmers are likely to be substantially higher than in the first half of 1950, as are prices and incomes in the Nation generally."

6. That this year the value of the dairy products of American farms moved differently than is historically the custom. "The value of dairy products consumed normally moves in the same direction as consumer incomes," the report says. "Two exceptions have been 1922 and 1950. The decline for dairy products from 1948 to 1950 is accounted for by a shift in consumers' expenditure pattern from foods to nonfood items, an increase in farm milk production, a decrease in exports of milk products and a sharp drop in prices of vegetable fats."

It adds that the retail values of dairy products probably will move upward in 1951.

MISSION—From Page 1

Protestants Pack Arena

Rev. Clarence W. Cranford, president of the Washington Federation of Churches, and the Rev. George E. Schnabel, chairman of the preaching mission.

Others taking part in the program included the Rev. Ward B. Hurlburt, chairman of the Federation committee on evangelism; Ambassador Norman J. O. Makin of Australia, and the Right Rev. Angus Dun, Episcopal Bishop of Washington.

A 250-voice choir of the Washington-Lee High School Chorus augmented by singers from local churches, and the United States Naval School of Music brass choir provided the music.

The mission is sponsored by the Washington Federation of Churches and brings 30 prominent religious leaders to the Capital to fill approximately 300 speaking engagements this week.

In addition, nightly services are scheduled at 19 different area churches, 11 Bible lectures and noonday services at downtown churches. Scores of service clubs and professional groups will hear the visitors.

Stassen Sees Self, Dewey and 'Ike' Still in '52 Race

Harold E. Stassen said yesterday neither he, Governor Thomas E. Dewey nor Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower should be ruled out as candidates for the Republican presidential nomination in 1952.

The president of the University of Pennsylvania, who sought the Republican nomination in 1948, said he thought it too early to say whether he would be a candidate or would name others he might support.

He added, however, "It is more likely I'll be supporting someone else."

Stassen, speaking on the National Broadcasting Company's "Meet the Press" television show, said he thought Eisenhower was "the most popular figure in America."

However, he said he did not believe it was doing Eisenhower "any great service" to discuss him as a possible presidential candidate while he is being considered for the job of supreme commander of the Western European forces.

New Opinion Day

We congratulate the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia on its decision to release its opinions on Thursdays instead of Mondays. Chief Judge Harold M. Stephens made it clear that the shift was decided upon as the result of a discussion within the court stimulated by The Washington Post's article and editorials calling attention to the concentration of court opinions on Mondays. With the Supreme Court, the Court of Appeals and sometimes other courts releasing their decisions on the same day, it has been impossible for the newspapers to give them adequate coverage. Many important opinions have scarcely reached the attention of the public because they have been lost in an avalanche of judicial decisions descending upon the press at the same time.

It was particularly unfortunate to have the Court of Appeals competing with the Supreme Court in this respect. Apparently Judge Stephens and his associates decided that it is more important to release their opinions when they can be properly reported than to cling to a meaningless tradition. We hope that other courts will be stimulated by this example to a review of their practice in releasing opinions. The United States Court of Claims has also been adding to the outpouring of opinions on Mondays. Can it not select another opinion day as easily as did the Court of Appeals and avoid bunching its opinions on the first Monday of each month? It is even more important for the Supreme Court to find ways and means of preventing the dumping of a dozen or more opinions into the lap of the press on a single day at the end of its term.

Paralyzing Strikes

If the strike called by the employes of Western Electric—a unit of the Bell telephone system—brings about a Nation-wide tieup of telephone facilities, the only weapon at the disposal of the Government would be the emergency provisions of the Taft-Hartley Act. This strike threat is thus a reminder that under existing law, strikes that paralyze the transportation and communications system or key defense industries are legal provided the parties to a dispute have complied with the provisions of the Railway Labor Act or the Taft-Hartley Act, as the case may be. The inadequacy of the Railway Labor Act as a strike preventive has been brought to public attention repeatedly in recent years. Last August the President again made use of a law passed in 1916 to seize the railroads to prevent a strike called by trainmen and conductors. That law authorizes him in time of war to take possession and assume control of any system of transportation and utilize it to move troops and war materials or for other purposes connected with the emergency. Obviously this law is not applicable to disputes involving telephonic communications. Nor would it have been applicable to the railroads but for the fact that the country is still technically on a war basis, although the President's general World War II seizure powers expired in 1947.

Despite the damaging effect of strikes that disrupt trade and industry the Defense Production Act relies on collective bargaining and use of mediation and conciliation facilities to settle labor disputes affecting national defense. Moreover, it specifically forbids action inconsistent with the provisions of the Taft-Hartley Act and other labor laws. This failure to protect the national interest against paralyzing strikes is all the more indefensible in view of the critical need for uninterrupted production and the importance of stabilizing wages as well as prices.

The seizure powers of the President should not only be enlarged, but provision should also be made for settlement of disputes that lead to seizure. The rail unions whose wage demands led to seizure of the roads last August, for instance, are still waiting for a settlement. Meantime other rail unions are demanding wage increases. With the Government nominally in control of the roads, strikes to enforce demands are to be sure, outlawed. However, it is evident that when settlements cannot be reached through collective bargaining, mediation and conciliation, seizure alone provides no solution of wage disputes. The logical next step is compulsory arbitration, permitting return of the seized property to private ownership, or outright Government dictation of settlement terms while the property is in Government hands. The chief danger of such enforced settlements is that ultraliberal wage increases will be granted. But it is a lesser danger than reliance on the existing ineffectual legal devices for preventing strikes that imperil national security by cutting down production and jeopardizing plans for organizing the economy for defense.

Bell Report

The unfortunate reactions in Manila to the rumors about the Bell Report probably hastened the release of that document in Washington. In any event, President Truman is to be complimented on changing his intention to withhold the report until a program based on its findings could be worked out. Suspicions growing out of the temporary suppression of the report caused far more trouble than its prompt publication would have done. That lesson might well have been learned from the mystery that grew up around the suppressed report of General Wedemeyer on China and Korea in 1947. In the case of the Bell Report, its release has brought from President Quirino only an expression of appreciation for its constructive criticism.

What Mr. Bell and his associates found in the Philippines is very disheartening. The economic situation has been deteriorating for the past two years. Agricultural and industrial output is still below the prewar level, although the population has increased 25 percent in the last decade. In the provinces, real wages of agricultural workers are lower than they were before the war, with some farm hands earning less than one peso (50 cents) a day. Nothing has been done to open new lands, improve methods of cultivation or better the position of farm workers and tenants. The rich have been getting richer and the poor poorer. Investment has gone into commerce and real estate rather than the development of agriculture and industry. Large foreign exchange receipts were dissipated in luxury imports, high profits, and the transfer of Philippine capital abroad. A breakdown in international payments has been averted only by stringent import and export controls, and further restrictions are essential.

The government has tried to cope with the symptoms of the disorder instead of striking at its causes. With an inefficient tax system covering only about 60 percent of the government's expenditures, some public employes are unpaid and inflation is rampant. The investigators found that inefficiency and corruption in the government are widespread. The people are disillusioned. Between the lines one can read fears that the Philippine Republic is headed for the rocks unless drastic measures are taken. But the outlook is not hopeless.

Without emphasizing the basic interest of the United States in the success of the Philippine experiment in self-government—the show window of democracy in Asia—the report urges this country to offer its aid through a technical mission with 250 million dollars to be used in the form of loans and grants over five years. These funds would be kept entirely under control of the American mission. Their release for various projects would be conditional on the effectuation of the recommended reforms. For example, the Bell Mission recommends new taxes tapping large Filipino incomes now lightly taxed, a balanced budget, civil service reforms, a minimum wage law, an act to protect organized labor, public health and educational programs, diversification of the economy, a temporary 25 percent levy on most imports except specified foods and fertilizer, and many other steps designed to restore a sound working economy. If the Philippine government wishes American help, it will have to meet these stiff requirements. Congress would not be justified in advancing another dollar of aid until Manila is ready to put into effect the conditions on which a stable economy can be built. China has taught us the worthlessness of rat-hole aid.

In the Philippines there is reason for hope that public opinion will force the Quirino regime to buy American help at the expense of facing realities, cleaning house and working for the general welfare of the Filipino people. But there is a large question as to whether the Manila government is capable of taking this rigorous course. Certainly it could not do so without strong expert aid from this country. The showdown is likely to come, therefore, on the acceptance of American advisers with full authority to cut off aid from this country if the steps essential to recovery are not taken.

Milk Merry-Go-Round

Just as the District Commissioners were beginning to pay some attention to Health Officer Seckinger in the Washington milk row, in steps Acting Corporation Counsel Gray to say that the importation of milk not inspected by the Health Department is illegal. There appears to be no basis for quarreling with Mr. Gray's interpretation of the Milk Act of 1925—though it is curious that the legality of milk imports did not become an issue during the eight-year period in which the Commissioners relaxed the law to permit them. But the milk situation cannot be left there.

The new arrangement whereby outside milk may be processed in District dairies for sale in suburban districts only is ridiculous. It implies that somehow the people in Arlington or Bethesda are hardier souls than Washingtonians and need less protection. The fact is, of course, that the Milk Act is unnecessarily restrictive. The milk law ought merely to insure that milk sold here will meet adequate sanitary standards irrespective of source, and reciprocal inspection by other States, according to United States Public Health Service rules, which sufficed here for eight years, ought to be adequate.

Dr. Seckinger warns that, whereas a milk surplus of 10 percent is considered the minimum safe margin, there is only a 9 percent surplus in Washington. In other words, the law is impairing Washington's milk supply. That is why the Commissioners ought to throw their weight behind an intelligent modernization of the law and why the attention paid by Representative A. L. Miller and Senator Gillette to Washington's milk problem is welcome.

Excess Profits

The economic defects and administrative complications of an excess profits tax have been set forth with a wealth of supporting evidence by Prof. Harley L. Lutz, tax consultant for the National Association of Manufacturers. His lucid exposition is not intended to be a plea for lightening the tax burdens of industry. On the contrary, he says that higher corporation taxes should be paid to help defray the cost of the defense program. But he advocates an increase in the present corporation income tax by a flat percentage as an alternative to an excess profits tax. In support of this proposal he also shows that a moderate increase in corporate income tax rates would produce as much revenue as an excess profits tax of the World War II type. The difference is that the letter is economically unsound and contributory to inflation.

As Dr. Lutz notes, there is no sharp dividing line between fair or reasonable profits and unfair, abnormal profits. The necessarily arbitrary methods adopted to measure excess profits in some cases may allow greater returns than the risk warrants, while in other cases they put too low a ceiling on profits, with adverse effects on new and rapidly growing concerns. Moreover, companies whose earnings happen to have been high in the base period receive better treatment than those that had low earnings in the base period. Conservatively capitalized companies are also harder hit than those with liberal capitalization under the invested capital method of computing excess earnings. Dr. Lutz also provides statistical ammunition based on World War II experience with which to demolish the contention that only large corporations have to pay excess profits taxes.

Emphasis at the present time should be on maximum production; and a tax system that confiscates all or most of the profits of a concern above certain levels conflicts with that objective. In fact, it sets "arbitrary ceilings beyond which economic growth can only be slow, feeble, and haphazard." A tax that siphons off extra profits is also an invitation to wasteful use of funds by taxed corporations, increasing production costs and raising the prices paid for military supplies and civilian goods.

Another serious defect of this form of tax is the difficulty of administering it, since numerous exemptions and exceptions have to be made to allow for hardship cases. At the end of June, 1949, for example, Dr. Lutz notes, there were still more than 22,000 unsettled cases involving approximately 4.9 billion dollars of contested excess profits taxes and it will be many years, no doubt, before all these cases are disposed of.

We wish that the facts brought out by this study had been called to public attention before the demand for reimposition of an excess profits tax had become virtually a political "must." Although there is slight hope that Congress will resist the popular appeal for an excess profits tax at this late date, the NAM discussion may create legislative support for a substantial modification of the World War II type of excess profits tax that some legislators would like to restore in response to emotional demands that the profits be taken out of defense business.

Useful Inquiry

Chairman O'Mahoney of the Senate Interior and Insular Affairs Committee is launching a study that may have far-reaching effects on our economy. Under a resolution passed during the closing days of the last session of Congress, the committee will survey available fuel reserves in the United States along with present and future rates of consumption, with the object of formulating policies for both peacetime and wartime. The chief objects of its inquiry will be coal, petroleum, natural gas and hydroelectric power, with special attention being given to coal. Senator O'Mahoney gives assurance that the committee begins its work with no preconceived policy to sustain—no case to prove. It will merely seek facts and be guided by them, but out of its survey of the unprogressive coal industry may come legislation to encourage more efficient production and use of coal and other fuels.

The committee is taking a broad view of its assignment that augurs well for a useful investigation. Conservation will undoubtedly enlist its interest, but conservation includes wise use of our resources. What the committee is primarily interested in is the development of the industries that provide fuel for our industrial machine. Both industrial and military power depend upon the use of energy resources. Recognizing that "the United States is richer in known energy resources readily available for development and use than any other nation," the committee wishes to make sure that this heritage is being used to keep our industrial system expanding and to ward off the economic collapse that the Communists are predicting for every capitalistic country. The committee has an opportunity to make a real contribution to our economic well-being as well as to our military potential.

Aid to Yugoslavia

In connection with the economic assistance to be given to Tito's Yugoslavia by the United States and Great Britain, may I write the following:

1. No grant of food (or any other aid) could relieve starvation of large masses unless the distribution of the grant is entrusted to the International Red Cross or other international humanitarian body. The fact that some material privileges of the bureaucracy have been abolished recently does not mean that equality has been established.

2. No development loan whatever can be more than a palliative unless the present economic plan is superseded by a new plan, drafted and executed in cooperation with American and British experts.

U. N. Flag

I should like to enlighten Mr. Alfred Kruchelski, junior vice commander, All American Post, of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, who wrote in his letter published October 24—United Nations Day—that we who wish to display the United Nations flag are American Quislings.

In supporting the United Nations, the peoples of the world are acting to secure their own future. As one of the organization nations, the United States should continue to give it the fullest support. In supporting the United Nations the peoples of the world do not recognize the United Nations as a super-state or world government, but rather as an organization that can and does moderate the differences of conflicting powers.

The United Nations has moved swiftly to counter the Communist aggression of June 25 with the United States taking the lead, and has since driven the North Korean Communists back to where they came from and beyond. It is possible that the Veterans of Foreign Wars in attacking the United Nations is unwittingly giving aid and comfort to the Communist enemy?

E. B. Henderson

Mr. Raymond B. Shell remarks in his letter of October 20 that Negroes should "have what they prove themselves worthy to have," and mentions E. B. Henderson as an example of one who should talk less and do more to win good repute for his race.

It gives me pleasure, therefore, to introduce Mr. Shell's distinguished fellow townsman, Dr. E. B. Henderson. After his college work at Harvard he studied medicine at Howard; but then turned to physical education and health, in which fields he received his M.A. at Columbia. Since 1904 he has been teaching in schools of the District; he has for some time been head of the department of health, physical education, and safety for all the Negro schools.

But Dr. Henderson fills a place of wider usefulness than this. He is active in the ADA, the school emergency committee, the AVC, the lay health committee in Fairfax County. He has long been on the board of the Negro YMCA, and for some time its chairman. During World War II he was the only Negro on the National Committee of Fitness. In the National Education Association he has served on national committees of the American Association of Health. He recently published a book, The Negro in Sports.

Mrs. Henderson has just retired after 31 years of teaching at the James Lee School in Falls Church, where for many years she was also principal. But she still keeps busy, with such useful activities as Girl Scouts. One of his sons, a Ph.D. from Wisconsin University, who has been studying as a fellow in California Institute of Technology, has recently been awarded a $25,000 grant from the Damon Runyon Cancer Fund to do cancer research at the Carver Institute, Tuskegee. The other son is in charge of all dental work at the Lorton Reformatory. Here is a family that any race would be proud to claim.

Falls Church Election

For a number of years I have lived in Falls Church and I hope to live here many more. Thus I feel that I have a right to comment about the referendum on November 7 concerning our city attorney, though I am only 17.

Though I am in general opposed to the policy and action of our present council and to some of the actions of the incumbent attorney, I support the principle and idea of an appointed attorney since we have a manager form of government.

Some of the official actions and political activities of our council over the past few months have been deplorable. Many of us well remember the campaigning in behalf of some council candidates that the city attorney did prior to the June 1949, election. As a student in the public schools I take a very dim view of the fact that some members of the city school board signed the statement by the so-called "Home Rule Committee."

The council has called for leaving out of personalities in this election, but they have clouded the issue and made this a contest concerning a personality, or rather a past job and past and present politicking.

"Lieut. Gilbert's Offense"

The much-discussed disciplinary case of Lieutenant Gilbert, upon which you thoughtfully editorialized on October 23, is interesting to me for reasons that go quite beyond the matter of whether Gilbert is in fact guilty or not guilty of military breach of conduct before the enemy.

Your statement that "There can be no room for argument when the life of every soldier may depend upon the proper performance of another soldier, especially an officer chosen as a leader," suggests a situation of serious moment which may well be overlooked or ignored by the military in determining for legalistic purposes whether or not a violation of the wartime code has been caused.

That is to say, that the responsibility for a soldier's "misconduct" in the face of the enemy may be inspired by the hard-headed infirmity of judgment of a superior commander, which, inversely, becomes misconduct before one's own forces, if you will. How many times, for example, have men in combat been ordered to certain death unnecessarily, indeed capriciously, not to protect larger numbers of their fellow osldiers from an equal fate, but because superior officers were faulty in judgment?

To say this is not to gainsay the fact that the need for discipline, particularly on the battlefield, is irrefutably a source of strength to a fighting force, and, similarly, a lack of discipline is a source of weakness whose repercussions might well be chaotic. Nor, by the same token, is it cavalierly to demean the effectiveness of leadership of American commanders, who, by the very nature of being human, cannot escape culpability in the teeth of error. It is to say, however, that "the king can do no wrong" philosophy which universally vitiates the officer corps is an affront to the dignity of the men beneath them.

Color Television

In response to Harry D. Flagle's letter of October 23, may I correct a few half-truths about CBS color television?

CBS television is not "compatible," because, in order to minimize flicker, CBS found it necessary to increase the number of "fields" transmitted per second. This, in itself, resulted in exceeding TV channel frequency limits. Hence, CBS chose to reduce the number of lines in the transmitted picture to bring their picture back to prescribed limits.

Now, is CBS color received on a black and white set, altered to receive the CBS color picture in black and white, degraded? Very definitely and vehemently yes! The present black and white system, and the black and white reproduction of NBC and CTI color TV all present a more faithful reproduction than the CBS system. Then; is a CBS color picture on a CBS color receiver better than present black and white, or the black and white reproductions of NBC or CTI color pictures? Very definitely, yes, simply because more information (in the form of primary colors) is received. In speaking of "picture degradation," CBS color is compared with present black and white; rather unfair, in my estimation.

Proponents of CBS color insist that CBS color is not, basically, a mechanical system; that the mechanical converter that will first be used is not necessary, that the tricolor tube can and will be used when developed to a usable stage. This is quite true. But what will be gained over the NBC or CTI electronic systems? The CBS electronic system will then compare in cost and complexity with NBC and CTI color.

To enjoy the use of the tricolor tube, which will be necessary to satisfy public demand for pictures larger than these obtainable by mechanical means, CBS must solve the same problems confronting NBC and CTI. I am sure, eventually, all color TV will be electronic. CBS electronic TV is inherently less satisfactory than NBC or CTI TV, as less intelligence, due to fewer lines, is transmitted.

What will be the effect of the FCC's color TV decision on the public? It will bring color TV now (or very shortly) to the public. It will eventually require all present sets to be modified to receive CBS transmissions. It will permit a simple mechanical converter to be used for small pictures. It will permit use of all-electric color TV in the near future.

What would have been the effect if a system such as CTI or NBC color had been favored? No existing sets would have to be modified; also black and white reproduction would be superior to CBS black and white. Color TV would not be immediately available; it would be available at about the same time CBS electronic TV would be: the NBC or CTI color picture would be better than the CBS color picture.

The net effect is acceptance of a less satisfactory picture in order to have color TV now. I must agree with FCC that "compatibility" is desirable, but not necessary, but only to the extent that our present picture is not degraded. The fact that the NBC and CTI systems are compatible is not a major advantage, in my estimation.

I have seen CBS color; it is excellent, with but minor exceptions. As a communications engineer (having not the remotest connection with CBS, NBC, CTI or other TV concerns) I must deplore the acceptance of a color TV system that represents engineering regression, a regression contrary to public interest.

Matter Of Fact

By Stewart Alsop

Mr. Gloom, Mr. Cheer

ST. LOUIS, Mo.—Observing the political goings-on in Ohio, Indiana, and here in Missouri, is rather like seeing the same play three times, with different actors in the main parts. The two principal parts are, of course, those of the Republican Incumbent and the Democrat Challenger.

The part of the Republican Incumbent calls for a somewhat crotchety fellow, getting on in age. He is very gloomy. He sees doom just around the corner. He warns constantly of the menace of world communism. But just to add a note of human inconsistency, his Senate record reveals that he has supported very spottily if at all those measures designed to deal with world communism. This part, played by Taft in Ohio and Capehart in Indiana, is played here by Senator Forrest Donnell, the crotchetiest of the lot.

The part of Democratic Challenger requires a younger and sleeker character. He is most cheerful. According to him, prosperity is permanent, and world peace assured, thanks to Harry Truman's Fair Deal. But he is humanly inconsistent also. For even as he extolls the Fair Deal, he backs rapidly away from those domestic measures which specifically identify it—notably the Brannan Plan and the Ewing health plan. This part, played by Alexander Campbell in Indiana and, somewhat inadequately, by Joseph Ferguson in Ohio, is played here, with considerable flair, by former Congressman Tom Hennings.

Although basically the same, the plot of this political drama is given its individual twist in each State. In Missouri the plot is embellished by a familiar dramatic theme—man's infidelity to man. Both candidates suffer from a certain faithlessness in their own party. The Republican infidelity to Donnell is strictly a local matter.

Here in St. Louis, the local Republican bigwigs have quite frankly written Donnell off. They are openly instructing the voters in the art of the split ticket—how to vote for Hennings and, at the same time, for local Republican candidates. This is sure to hurt Donnell badly. He has also been hurt by a complex vendetta within the Republican organization, which has thoroughly disrupted the organization, leaving it short on money and leadership.

Donnell has never, however, been an organization man, and he has never been strong in St. Louis, which he is apt to compare publicly and disparagingly with the rural areas, where his real strength lies. In the rural counties he has been campaigning with an energy rivaling that of Senator Taft. His campaign line is a familiar one throughout the Middle West—the Truman Administration is responsible for casualties in Korea, communism, confusion, corruption and the cost of living. But probably more effective than this collection of Cs is Donnell's campaign style, which is wonderfully folksy (he is said to remember not only the names of the voters, but the names of the voters' cows) and his public reputation for a fanatical personal honesty.

The challenger, Hennings, also has his troubles in his own party. Last week both State Chairman Charles Huttig and State Organizer Richard Nacy traveled to Washington. Their mission was to get money for the Hennings' campaign, and also the public blessing of President Truman. They returned disgruntled, with neither money nor blessing. There are various explanations for this failure of a mission.

One is that Truman has often burned his fingers in his home State, most recently when Hennings defeated the Truman-backed candidate in the primaries, the colorless Emery Allison. Another is that Truman simply dislikes Hennings personally.

Presumably Truman will be obliged to say a kind word for Hennings when he speaks here next week. Yet Hennings can anticipate little real help from Washington. But he, too, is an effective campaigner. He has even introduced a refreshing note of honesty in the campaign, by backing Truman's veto of the anti-Communist bill, and refusing to back down (for which he was applauded by the influential and brilliantly edited St. Louis Post-Dispatch). Hennings' battle with Allison has actually been a major asset, since Allison was backed by the slightly decomposed remnants of the Kansas City Binaggio and Pendergast machines, and since the Democrats have now closed ranks behind Hennings. Finally, Hennings is receiving effective support from labor, which has marked Donnell as target number two, after Taft.

For such reasons, Hennings is believed here to have a slight edge. But the fact is that here, as everywhere in the Middle West, there is a huge "mute vote" this year. No one really knows whether the voters, the audience for whom this political drama is being played out, actually prefer that gloomy fellow, the Republican Incumbent, or his rather speciously cheery rival, the Democratic Challenger.

Montgomery Election

There is a real threat that the long, hard, successful effort of past years to oust the Brooke Lee machine of Montgomery County may go down the drain on election day.

Why? Because that machine put over the Lindsay law which requires regular party labels in local elections, and when there are such labels the invaluable help is lost of many Federal employes who live in the county but cannot participate in partisan elections under the Hatch Act.

A Communication

Fairfax Government: County Manager Plan

By Mrs. Edward A. Macy

President, League of Women Voters of Fairfax County

IT IS unfortunate that opponents of county manager plan have been labeling the many citizens of Fairfax County who are working for good government "bold and ruthless pressure groups." It is even more unfortunate that David Lawrence (communication published October 26) has echoed this absurdity when he speaks of the "politicians who are lurking behind the pressure groups to take over under the county manager system."

The League of Women Voters has worked long and earnestly for this change to a county manager form of government, and therefore we feel that an answer to Mr. Lawrence is in order.

The league is a nonpartisan organization of women who believe that government is everybody's business. We joined the Committee for Good Government of Fairfax County, which is composed also of the Federation of Citizen's Associations, the Taxpayers' Advisory Association and countless individuals, many of whom have worked for years on a volunteer basis in county health, welfare, and educational matters.

We had all found that our county government was not adequate to cope with the complex needs of our present situation, and after studying all available forms, we arrived independently at the conclusion that the county manager form is best suited to the needs of the county and will give us good government for years to come.

WE DID NOT devise this form ourselves. It was carefully drafted by real authorities in county government after years of study.

Dr. George W. Spicer of the University of Virginia, served for 10 years (as chairman for six) on this Virginia Commission on County Governments which was appointed by Harry F. Byrd, then Governor of Virginia. He tells us that the members of the commission believed in county-wide voting on supervisors with one coming from each district, and that they drafted both the county manager and the county executive forms with this method of election.

Dr. Spicer says: "As one who participated modestly in the formulation of the act of 1932, I am definitely opposed to the election of members of the board of supervisors by districts. On the five-man commission that formulated that act were three veteran county officers—two of them chairmen of their respective boards of supervisors—and on this point we were unanimous.

"Under the method of electing boards of supervisors from magisterial districts the voters of the county are in effect disfranchised with respect to all but one of the members of their board of supervisors."

DR. SPICER CONTINUES: "The magisterial district is no longer a governmental unit; it has no administrative functions. County services are no longer performed on a district basis. Thus from the administrative point of view the board should represent the county as a whole.

"More important is the relation of this problem to democratic, representative government. It would seem obvious that each voter has a greater voice in the control of his government when he is able to vote on all the members of his governing board than when he is limited to voting for only one member. The decisions which affect each citizen must be made by the whole governing body and not by one member from a single magisterial district. This problem is vastly more serious in those counties—and there are many of them—having a gross inequality of population among the several districts.

"Certainly 'representative government must ever be mindful of minority interests.' But this does not mean that a small minority should be placed in a position to dictate to, or to block the action of the overwhelming majority in matters of public policy. Nobody who dwells in the shadow of Monticello should contemplate such a possibility with complacency."

THE FACTS behind the change to district election in Henrico County (which originally had the complete county manager form we seek for Fairfax County) are of immense interest.

The chairman of the Board of Supervisors of Henrico County for the past 16 years, Mr. W. H. Ferguson, explained this to us as follows: ". . . the office-holding group opposes any change which might affect their tenure of office or that would curtail the income derived from offices held. This group strongly opposed the adoption of the county manager form as originally set up, and continued the opposition after its adoption even to the extent of the securing of a second referendum about three years after the original set up. This referendum continued the manager form.

"The political opposition, thus defeated, then sabotaged the situation by inducing the delegate from Henrico to secure passage of a law changing the election of supervisors to a district basis. Since two of the four districts in the county had been carried by the opposition the thought, no doubt, was that the manager form could thus be wrecked. This did not happen; the member from one district where the vote was very close decided to throw in with the good government group, and since all the supervisors were regularly nominated by the Democratic Party, there has been a great deal of harmony ever since.

"From the foregoing you can see that the manager form has not suffered at the hands of the county citizens but rather from the political setup in the Legislature where sabotaging the manager form has taken place."

IN 1940 the Legislature also made this same change in the county executive form as a general law.

Dr. Spicer says of this amendment that it "introduced a basic difference in the two forms." It is because of this basic difference that the league has been urging all voters who wish a change in their government to choose county manager which is not only specifically recommended by Dr. Spicer for Fairfax County, but also by two other nationally known authorities on government, Harold A. Stone and Kathryn H. Stone.

As to this astonishing myth which Mr. Lawrence propounds that county-wide elections would "afford a perfect setup for a political machine," political experience has proved and all political scientists agree that precisely the opposite is true. Even the words "precincts and wards" have, in the minds of many, a slightly unsavory connotation, for the most powerful machines in the country owe their power to well organized wards and precincts.

Leagues all over the country sponsor candidates' meetings, and we plan to hold them in every district if the county manager form is adopted. The league feels that it is politically healthy for the candidates to have to appear on platforms in all areas of the county to answer voters' questions and to present their programs on an impersonal basis.

IT IS curious that Mr. Lawrence, who wrote in the commission report that "a vast amount of data was gathered by the commission not only from organizations and individuals within the county, but from outside the county" should have quoted, in support of his views, only one authority. We called on that one, Mr. Lewis Meriam of the Brookings Institution, who told us that the most important sentence in his reply to the commission was: "Whether members of the Board of Supervisors should be elected by district or at large would, in my judgment depend on the local situation." Mr. Meriam told us that he has no knowledge of Fairfax County.

What did the rest of this "vast amount of data" show? We can only guess at the contents of the answers received by Mr. Lawrence, for they have not been made public nor even revealed to some of the members of the study commission.

We do know that the overwhelming feeling of the citizens and organizations who testified publicly to the commission was that the county manager form of government is what Fairfax County needs. The research that went into the studies of the league and the other organizations of the Committee for Good Government is very impressive. That all, entirely independently, had arrived at the same conclusion is also impressive.

We are most eager that every voter in the county know all the facts when he votes in this extremely important referendum, and we will be happy to show all our source material and our findings to any voter who wishes the information. That is one of the basic purposes of the League of Women Voters.

West Germans Shun Thought Of Getting Back in Uniform

(This is the first in a series of five articles on conditions in Western Germany. The author has just returned from a journey to Bonn, Berlin, Munich, Dusseldorf and other population centers, where she interviewed political leaders, industrialists, social workers and labor leaders to gain an insight into German views on economic conditions, European defense, and resistance to communism. The second article in this series will be published Tuesday).

By Agnes E. Meyer

Post Reporter

It is obvious that the German people must be included as soon as possible in any military plans for the successful defense of western Europe. But the postponement of German rearmament by the French is not without its fortunate aspects.

In fact, the present state of mind of the Germans is such that recruiting them for a Western army would have dangerous repercussions which Communist propaganda could exploit to good advantage. For, on the whole, the Germans are still a sick people, only just keeping their heads above water in a sick economy. They suffer daily in a multitude of ways from the devastating results of the last war. They resent the occupation government. At the same time they are deeply suspicious of their own conservative political and industrial leadership.

Nationalistic Curbs Sought

The French demand, that the Schuman Plan be accepted before German armed forces become a part of the Atlantic defense system, is oddly enough exactly what the German people themselves yearn for as the only method of controlling any nationalistic ambitions of the Ruhr steel, coal and chemical magnates.

With no guidance in which they have any confidence, the vast majority, especially of the younger men and women, are confused, fearful, skeptical, rootless and unhappy. The very thought of getting back into uniform arouses deep antagonism in these disturbed mentalities. The will to defend their country is almost nonexistent. And the belief that the Bonn government has enough prestige simply to order the people back into the army is doubtful, to say the least.

The Germans are strongly anti-Communist. But if they had a choice between communism and another war, many of these war-weary people, in their present frame of mind, would prefer to accept communism. Pastor Niemoeller, who declared that Germans should never fight their brothers in the East Zone, is by no means the only one who yearns to remain neutral if the Allies are forced into a war with Russia.

The reasons for this dangerous mood must be understood by the military chiefs of the Atlantic Treaty nations. And the interval, which will probably elapse before Western Germany can be included in the Atlantic defense system, should be used to bolster the morale, the self-confidence and the economic prospects of the hard-pressed and despondent German masses by the prompt implementation of the Schuman Plan.

Recovery Amazing

The economic recovery that Germany has made since the stabilization of its currency in April, 1948, is amazing. Over 14 million people are employed and the figure is rising every day. Bomb-damaged factories and houses have been repaired. Five hundred thousand new housing units will be completed in 1950, the most ever built in Germany within a single year.

Every hamlet shows a few of the bright, red-tiled roofs, which indicate new construction. Every inch of arable ground is under superb cultivation. A constant flow of heavily laden trucks on the auto-bahnen makes the traveler aware of intense business activity.

Social conditions have also improved since D-mark day. Crime, stealing and youthful delinquencies were immediately reduced when the black market trade was eliminated. The outward order and stability that now exist in Germany are all the more impressive because they follow closely upon years of utter chaos and universal despair.

But instead of creating a brave new world with the billions of Marshall aid that we have poured into Germany, we have merely put back into power the old type of leadership that could not cope with mass unemployment and therefore made Hitler possible. Moreover, in the allotment of Marshall aid, we have not insisted on control of the wage scale; we have made it look as if we were out to build up the big employers, in the hope that some of the gravy would trickle down to the workers. As a result, wages in Germany are shockingly low.

The national average monthly wage of skilled workers in Germany is 270 marks, or about $68; the average for unskilled workers, 200 marks, or $50 per month; those of skilled women factory workers as low as $40 per month.

Workers Paying for War

On these salaries the workers pay a total of 16 percent for social insurance and taxes. Their total earnings in 1948 were 32.2 billion marks; in 1949, 41.6 billions, and for the first half of 1950, 22 billions. The employers also have high taxes, but they have many loopholes, whereas the worker has none. It is the worker who is paying for the war. Food prices have been rising since June, so that real wages are going down. Most workers are able to eat meat only once a week. If the Bonn government does not move soon to control prices, it will be obliged to increase relief not only to the dependent millions but to other millions with inadequate salaries, for otherwise these people will not be able to keep body and soul together.

The number of unemployed youth between 20 and 25 years of age, most of whom have no prospect of vocational training, represents a fourth of all the unemployed, or about 300,000 individuals.

Especially deplorable is the desperate state of mind among young intellectuals. I met young doctors who were working for nothing at the hospital of Munich University Medical School, simply to have something to do. Out of 39 doctors at this hospital, only nine have salaries. The rest work as volunteers without pay. They support themselves playing in jazz bands at some cabaret until 2 a.m. or by any other job they can find. There are thousands of doctors, chemists, physicists and other white collar workers who are completely superfluous now that the vast research projects of industry, the army and the navy have been disbanded. Yet young people are still streaming into the professions, in spite of the fact that Germany's only need is for skilled workmen, because there still exists a great gap between the social status of the professional class and manual labor.

34,100 More Employed In Executive Branch

Civilian employment rose to 2,094,400 in the executive branch of the Government on October 1 because of increases in the military departments.

The figures, given out by the Civil Service Commission, showed a net increase of 34,100. The Defense employment rose 44,600, while other categories declined. The over-all increase was less than half that of August, the commission said.

Million Letters Greet First Marine Division

WITH UNITED STATES FIRST MARINE DIVISION, Korea, Oct. 29 (AP).—More than one million letters from home were delivered to members of this division today.

The mail had accumulated during the division's voyage from Inchon to its Wonsan landings.

"Whoopee! They still love me—all six of 'em," shouted one marine as the letters were doled out in possibly the biggest single mail call in Marine history.

Ship Reported Released

HONGKONG, Oct. 29 (AP).—The Chinese Nationalist government was reported today to have released the British ship Northern Glow, which had been detained for three and one-half months. The ship was was intercepted in the Formosa Strait with a cargo of iron plates.

It's a new twist!

Stroock—the magical name in woolens—had a great inspiration when he twisted nine fibers of various colors into a blended thread of definite, pleasing color characteristic. He named it Folkweave. Freeman, of Philadelphia, a great tailor, found this fabric more than worthy of his skill. We've sold Freeman Folkweave suits for many years and we assure you that for appearance, style and value they are supreme.

Priestley's Latest Is Wryly Amusing

By Richard L. Coe

J. B. PRIESTLEY is a man you can always count on to be stimulating and his "Last Holiday," at the Trans-Lux, will delight his admirers. It's got a mite of the quality of Sutton Vane's "Outward Bound" and I think you'll be engrossed from start to finish.

Priestley's hero, Alec Guinness, is a man who's been told that a rare disease gives him only a few weeks to live. He chucks his job as salesman for a farm implement outfit, cashes in his insurance and prepares to pass his time in rich company at a posh, country hotel. How he makes these people, both rich and humble, see themselves as they are and how briefly the spell lasts provides a succession of incidents and observations. It's got that "Nothing but the Truth" angle which has been popular before and the finale is wry and mordaunt.

Guinness underplays skillfully, making the character refreshing and dignified. Everyone probably won't go for this one, but I found it quietly amusing.

"LAST HOLIDAY," an Associated British-Path release of ABPC-Watergate production and screenplay by J. B. Priestley. At the Trans-Lux.

ALFRED HITCHCOCK deserves a sure way to seem like a tennis champion . . . For Farley Granger's Forest Hill finals scene in "Strangers on a Train," he's going to photograph Player Granger in all possible shots at all possible distances . . . Then, he'll strip them all together in a mounting crescendo of scoring, the while getting closer and closer to the anxious player's face. . . . It's a neat trick for home moviemakers to show and then say, "But, of course, I stopped my tennis some years ago."

DONA MASON, the songbird, and Nick Lipton, the pianist, played to quite a table the other night at the Colony: the likeable Granger, Robert Walker (who, says Hitchcock, will make a whammy hit as the man who makes a murder agreement with Granger in "Strangers on a Train"), Cyril Ritchard and Madge Elliott. . . In honor of "The Relapse" stars, Nick played some Noel Coward numbers they'd sung in London.

EILEEN BARTON flattened me but good by telling me 18 months ago she'd almost bought me some shortnin' bread. . . Seems that in the days before "Bake a Cake" she'd played the Capitol and I'd written: "Miss Barton looks like a canary and sings like Nelson Eddy" . . . Which I'd completely forgotten, but Bright-eyes Barton knew every word. . . Glad I'd written about how the little girl from "Best Foot Forward" has found her personality before she told me, but I never did get the shortnin' bread, Eileen.

OVERHEARD in the bar next to the Gayety, where "The Relapse, or Virtue in Danger" begins its final week tonight: "What's the show next door?" . . . "I dunno. Something about the Repulse or Virgin in Danger."

DICK SKINNER, the Guild's company manager and Olney's summer chieftain, adds to this by telling how, leaving Philadelphia last week were two theatrical companies, "The Relapse" and "Mr. Roberts" . . . "Which company are you?" asked the non-theaterwise porter, "Mr. Rabbitt or the Collapse?"

MRS. TRUMAN hit a theater-going stride last week, seeing "Call Me Madame" in New York and "The Relapse" here Friday night . . . Theater people find the First Lady an excellent audience because she seems to relax and wants to enjoy herself . . . And she endeared herself to Skinner on leaving by saying: "See you at Olney."

MRS. MESTA'S diplomacy at getting to see Ethel Merman's spoof about an American lady who's Minister to Lichtenburg rates notice. . . . There'd been talk that she was officially ordered to stay away, at least from the opening, with which she complied. . . . However, by seeing it with Mrs. Truman and the First Daughter, the lady diplomat couldn't have been in better company, a private citizen above reproach. . . . When I complimented Mrs. Mesta on her diplomatic maneuver, she only smiled. . . . But rather like a kitten who'd swallowed a goldfish.

HARDIE MEAKIN'S Board of Trade award at the Johnston Office was not only for his work in helping piece the production of "The Seven Cities of Washington," a This Is America short, together, but also recalled his years as Routing Expert for the Roosevelt Birthday Balls. . . . That short, which is due for Keith's soon, has, by the way, an exceptionally bright script. . . . And small wonder: it's by 29th street's Marya Mannes, whose most ghastly experience in life came when she was Broadway's youngest playwright . . . On the opening night the star was squiffled and read the lines of the third act in the second and vice versa.

ARTHUR GODFREY has been elected "Personality of the Year" by the Variety Club's Tent No. 11 . . . Present and past chief barkers were unanimous in their votes; the award will be made at a dinner this winter . . . Last year's and the first recipient was another Washingtonian, the late Al Jolson.

THE JAMES THURBERS, by now, one hopes, happily enjoying Hot Springs, have, naturally, a switch on agents . . . The deft, daft writer-artist's former agent owes him a thousand dollars . . . Happened this way: A Hollywood studio bought a Thurber story, for which presumed services rendered, Thurber paid agent $1000 . . . Then Thurber decided it wouldn't make a good movie after all, gave back the studio its full price . . . By not selling the story, Thurber's in the hole the agent's fee.

Eagles Smother Redskins, Baugh in 35 to 3 Rout

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

SHIBE PARK, Philadelphia, Oct. 29.—The Redskins took the field this afternoon with what is most certainly a modest ambition. All they want to do is win a football game and thus bring their batting average against the Eagles up to .143 for the past four seasons.

Referee Emil Heintz gives the coin a high toss and if it comes down, the two teams will choose goals. The chances that it will are rated pretty good. Like the airlines, who boast they never left a passenger up there, football referees have never walked away without reclaiming their half-buck.

Povich

The Eagles won the toss, elected to receive, couldn't gain, punted, and nailed Charlie Justice on the Redskins' 31-yard line. Jack Myers made the tackle on his third attempt. He missed the tackle originally but Justice obligingly came back Myers' way twice more, trying to elude a couple of other guys.

Bill Dudley takes the Redskins to the Eagles 7-line and then settles for a field goal from the 15. The Redskins have a 3-0 lead, and the bettors who laid 17 points against them have incipient ulcers, and a new interest in that bland diet.

CHARLEY JUSTICE takes a hand-off from Gilmer and gallops to a bit of glory on a 71-yard sprint around right end. Johnny Green, Eagle end, came in for a bit of glory himself. Henceforth he will be known as the guy who caught Justice from behind. The road-bed suddenly got rough for Choo-Choo on the Eagles 9-yard line.

The Redskins get no touchdown. Bob Goode took it into his head to try a lateral to Dudley and fumbled it into the arms of Norman Willey on the Redskins 6. Willey-nilly got away but was dragged down from behind.

When the Redskins regain the ball, they claim interference on the play as Gilmer pitches one to Taylor that is dropped in the end zone. The Redskins should have kept their mouths shut. The referee rules interference all right, but they add that Taylor interferred with Russ Craft on the catch, and the Eagles get the ball.

7-3, Eagles. Van Buren, a common carrier, just bashed a few Redskin heads on three bangs at the line from 2 yards out, and scored the first touchdown of the day.

Hey, there's gambling on the game. Figuratively thumbing their noses at High Commissioner Bert Bell, the Eagles take a chance and run the ball on fourth down from their own 36-yard line and cash a nice bet with a first down.

14-3, Eagles. Pete Pihos just bobbed up in the midst of Haynes and Dowda and took a 39-yard pass from Tommy Thompson to go all the way. At this point you could call the defensive play of the Redskins quite offensive.

BOTH TEAMS COME out on the field for the second half, and they'll start it whenever they can get the Eagles' band off the gridiron. The bandsmen are as stubborn about the whole thing as were the Eagles when the Redskins had the ball in scoring territory.

Sammy Baugh starts the second half for the Redskins, and they call four running plays in a row. It's the first time that the world's finest passing quarterback was ever in there as a decoy.

Blocking for Thompson on a pass play, Pihos cold-cocks Mike Drazenovich of the Redskins, and they revive him with smelling salts. Drazenovich gets up fighting and would like to take a swing, perhaps, at Earl Blaik, who says the pros don't play hard football.

Steven Van Buren, probably to his own surprise, finds himself loose on a 41-yard run through right tackle, and then decides to get fancy and go into a dance on the Redskins' 30. He tries to side-step Dowda about as gracefully as a lummox, and winds up on his back.

21-3, EAGLES. BAUGH, trying to pass, was grabbed in an up-loving embrace by Green of the Eagles and the only receiver he found was Joe Muha of the Eagles. From 16 yards out, nothing was in front of Muha except the goal line.

28-3, Eagles. Mr. Green is in again. He just grabbed up a loose ball that Baugh fumbled on a pass attempt, and hopped across from the 2-yard line.

Apparently the best thing the Eagles have going for them is Baugh's passing. Anyway, Frank Reagan just grabbed one and toted it back 47 yards to the Redskins' 20, and they scored their third touchdown within 2½ minutes on a Mackrides-to-Ledbetter pass into the end zone.

It's now 35-3, Eagles, with 6 minutes to play and they have the ball again. Working on next week's plays, no doubt. The crowd is announced as 33,707, and that may be the Redskins' trouble—perhaps they're not accustomed to playing before so many people.

All week there has been conjecture about the ability of the Redskin coaches to get the team fired-up for this game. Well, the Redskins were up for this one—up in Philadelphia.

Ratterman Leads Yanks Over Bears By 38 to 27

By Joe Reichler

NEW YORK, Oct. 29 (AP).—George Ratterman, understudy to Johnny Lujack at Notre Dame, outshone his illustrious former teammate today as he sparked the New York Yanks to a brilliant 38-27 victory over the Chicago Bears in a National Football League game at Yankee Stadium.

A crowd of 48,642 paid customers, largest ever to watch a Ted Collins-owned club, saw the Yanks retain their first place hold in the National Conference.

Ratterman had a hand in all his team's scoring as the Yanks powered to their sixth triumph in seven games this season. The brilliant 23-year-old T-man threw two touchdown passes, scored one and set up the other two with long heaves.

Chicago	STATISTICS	New York
25	First downs	15
188	Rushing yardage	192
364	Passing yardage	276
46	Passes attempted	19
22	Passes completed	10
6	Passes intercepted	1
2	Punts	5
38.5	Punting average	38.4
0	Fumbles lost	2

Lujack did a yeoman job for the Bears in a losing cause. He scored one touchdown, accounted for another with a 67-yard TD heave and set up a third with a series of passes. He also kicked three extra points.

Lujack completed 20 of 39 passes and carried the ball six times to account for 359 of Chicago's total of 472 yards on the ground and in the air. However, six of his tosses were intercepted by an alert New York backfield to set up three Yank touchdowns. The six interceptions tied a team record.

Ratterman threw all but one of his team's 19 forwards, completed 10 for 276 yards.

After Chicago had taken a 13-0 lead in the opening minutes of the first quarter on a Lujack's 67-yard TD aerial to Ken Kavanaugh and a 9-yard end sweep by the same Lujack, Ratterman got his Yanks going.

A 46-yard pass from Ratterman to Jack Russell put the Yanks on Chicago's 17. Five plays later Zollie Toth cracked over left tackle from the 2 to make it 13-7. Toth, the league's leading ground gainer, accumulated 72 yards during the game to raise his season's total to 450. That bettered the former team mark of 426 set by Johnny Grigas in 1946.

Another long Ratterman pass, a 37-yarder to Sherman Howard midway in the second quarter after Pete Layden had intercepted a Lujack pass, placed the Yanks on Chicago's 10. Three plays later Ratterman went over on a quarterback sneak from the one. The second of Chet Adams' five conversions put the Yanks in front for the first time, 14-13.

The Yanks added another score in the period when Bennie Aldridge stole a Lujack pass on New York's 42 and Ratterman teamed up with End Art Weiner on a beautiful 58-yard scoring pass play.

After a scoreless third quarter, Ratterman put his team three touchdowns in front when he hit Barney Poole with a 52-yarder for another score. The Bears fought back gamely, scoring two touchdowns within eight minutes to come within one point of tying. Paced by Lujack, who completed four of six passes, the Bears climaxed an 86-yard drive with Julie Rykovich bulling over from the two.

A Yank gamble that backfired helped the Bears to their last touchdown. With inches to go on his own 22 for a first down, Toth elected to try for it instead of kicking and ran into a stone wall. The Bears needed only three line bucks to cross paydirt, George Gulyanics going over.

Just when it appeared that the Bears were going to pull the game out of the fire, Ratterman uncorked another of his long heaves, this time completing a 59-yard pass to Weiner that brought New York to Chicago's nine. Howard went over standing up to snuff out the Bears' hopes. Adams' 20-yard field goal in the final minute was just so much dressing.

Chicago Bears	13	0	0	14—27
New York Yankees	7	14	0	17—38

Chicago scoring: Touchdowns—Kavanaugh, Lujack, Rykovich, Gulyanics. Conversions—Lujack (3).

PORTSMOUTH, Va., Oct. 29 (AP).—Slammin' Sam Snead fired sizzling subpar rounds of 63 and 65 here today to win top honrs in the 1950 Middle Atlantic Open golf tournament.

The White Sulphur Springs (W. Va.) slammer carved 18 strokes from par over the Glensheallah course during the 54-hole event to finish with a 192 total for two days of play.

Five strokes behind the Nation's leading money winner this year in golfing circles was host pro and National PGA Champion Chandler Harper, who had a 13-under-par 54-hole total of 197.

Two strokes behind Snead when play began today, Harper lost three more strokes during the morning round, when his 66 was eclipsed by Snead's seven-under-par 63. Both men had 65 during the afternoon round.

Another five strokes back of Harper in third place was George Fazio, veteran tournament performer from Washington, with a 202.

Three more Middle Atlantic professionals deadlocked with identical scores of 203—Andy Gibson, of Baltimore; Al Houghton, of Landover, Md., and Harold Oatman, of Norfolk.

Motley Leads Crushing Attack Against Steelers

CLEVELAND, Oct. 29 (AP).—Cleveland's Browns had that "new look" today as they kept their vaunted passing attack under cover until the closing minutes while tearing up the turf for a 45 to 7 victory over the Pittsburgh Steelers before a crowd of 40,714.

The Browns, known as a passing team for the last five years, threw only 10 times today, completing six for 195 yards while the Steelers tossed 36 aerials and completed 13 for 222.

Cleveland stayed on the ground for its first four touchdowns.

The first came in six plays, which covered 32 yards after Dopey Phelps had returned the opening kickoff 64 yards to the Pittsburgh 31. Otto Graham, Brown quarterback, plunged over for the counter.

In the second quarter, Motley took a pitchout from Graham, romped 50 yards to the Steelers' two, where Pittsburgh dug in and forced Lou Groza to place kick from the six.

The Browns made it 17-0 at the half when Tommy James intercepted Bob Gage's pass, ran it back to the Steeler 48 and the Browns moved to a touchdown in six plays with Motley taking a pitchout from Graham for the last 17 yards.

Van Brocklin Stuns Detroit With Five Scoring Passes

By Bob Myers

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 29 (AP).—The Los Angeles Rams paralyzed the Detroit Lioons with devastating aerial blasts and rocked them into a 65-24 defeat today in a National Football League contest.

Nine times the Rams scorched the scoreboard with touchdowns, plus a field goal. Six of the touchdowns made via the air—five of the strikes hurled by Norm Van Brocklin.

A crowd of 27,475 stunned but elated fans witnessed the game, one that sent the Rams into second place in the National Conference standings and proved to be in complete contrast to the tight 30-28 Ram victory over this same Detroit club two weeks ago.

The Rams' big splurge came in the third quarter when they crossed the goal line six times for 41 points.

Detroit, in taking its worst licking in its series with the Rams, was hampered by the absence of two stars, Halfback Doak Walker was used only as a kicking specialist and in the first quarter sent Detroit into a temporary three-point lead with a 47-yard field goal. He also converted after Detroit's three touchdowns. These came in the last three periods.

End Cloyce Fox, ace pass receiver, was unable to play at all.

Detroit's Wally Triplett displayed four amazing kickoff returns, traveling 97 yards for a touchdown, 74 on another that set up the field goal, and runs of 81 and 42 yards on the others.

Van Brocklin tied the team record for touchdown throws held by Bob Waterfield. He completed scoring passes good for 43, 42, 30, 31 and 13 yards.

Waterfield, the alternate quarterback, completed another touchdown pass for 67 yards, kicked a 30-yard field goal and converted seven times.

Detroit's substitute quarterback, Fred Enke, connected with two scoring throws in the last half, one for 46 and the other for 43 yards. Both went to End Johnny Greene.

Of the two Los Angeles touchdowns scored on the ground, one came on the spectacular 93-yard return of a kickoff by V. T. Smith. The other was registered by Van Brocklin on a quarterback sneak from 1 foot out.

Colts Make Game Try But Lose Again

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 29 (AP). Southpaw Quarterback Frank Albert passed and directed the San Francisco Forty-Niners to a 17-14 victory over the Baltimore Colts today in a spectacular National Pro League game that furnished thrills up to the final gun.

A crowd of 15,091 saw the 49ers break a deadlock in the fourth period with a touchdown and a field goal, then stave off a Baltimore bid in the last seconds.

The Colts also scored a fourth period touchdown to trail by three tallies with less than 30 seconds to play. They recovered an onside kickoff and completed a 25-yard pass from San Francisco's 47 to the 22. With a second to go another pass was intercepted by the 49ers.

Tied 7-7, Baltimore made a 72-yard march in the third period with Y. A. Tittle making accurate pitches with a slippery ball. The field was soft, from rain the last few days. The 49ers finally regained possession of the ball on downs. That was after an apparent touchdown for the Colts was nullified. Tittle passed to Collins in the end zone but Baltimore was offsides.

San Francisco tallied early in the fourth quarter to climax a 65-yard drive. Albert went over from the 1-yard line on a quarterback sneak.

San Francisco later put the ball into play on Baltimore's 24, following a 24-yard punt return by Jim Cason. A few plays later Gordon Soltau booted a field goal from 13 yards out.

Tittle came back with a great passing exhibition. He lofted a long one to End Hal Crisler, good for 61 yards to San Francisco's 3. Chet Mutryn banged through the line for the last yard.

Lowell Wagner, defensive star of the 49ers, snared a throw by Baltimore's Adrian Burk in the second period to set up a San Francisco score. Fullback Emil Sitko rambled the last four yards around right end. Soltau place-kicked the extra point.

Shortly after, the 49ers advanced from the Baltimore 42 to the 6 where the Colts turned the potential scoring threat into a break for themselves. Defensive Back Maggioli intercepted Albert's pass and raced back 51 yards to San Francisco's 48.

Tittle had his firing arm working smoothly in this clutch. He speared one to Paul Salata, left end and 49er outcast, good for 13 yards. The Colts were set back five yards to the 31, from where Tittle shot one to Hal Crisler. The later made the catch at the goal line. Rex Grossman converted to make the count 7-7 at halftime.

3 Passes By Sammy Backfire in 4th Period

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 29.—Against the pitching of Sammy Baugh, the Philadelphia Eagles today scored three fourth-period touchdowns in 2½ minutes to turn a 14-3 lead over the Redskins into a 35-3 rout.

They intercepted two of his passes, converting them into touchdowns, and capped their incredible performance against Slingin' Sam by recovering a fumble by him as he was about to pass and turning that into a touchdown also.

Two of the amazing 6-pointers came within 36 seconds of each other as the Eagles moved into first place in the National Football League's American Conference with their fifth straight triumph while the Redskins secured their hold on last place in the same division by losing their fifth consecutive game.

Baugh sent in to relieve Harry Gilmer who injured his shoulder shortly before halftime, had one of the worst afternoons he's experienced in 14 years of football. He essayed nine passes, completed only three and had four intercepted.

It was the seventh straight Philadelphia victory over Washington since 1946 and also the first time the Redskins hadn't scored a touchdown in almost three years.

Redskins Collapse in 4th Period

Five different Eagles scored for Coach Greasy Neales' defending champions. Bill Dudley did all of the Redskins' scoring with a 15-yard field goal in the first quarter. Choo-Choo Justice came awful close with a great 71-yard sprint in the same period only to have his great run voided two plays later when a fumble gave the Eagles the ball.

The Eagles wiped out the 3-0 deficit with two touchdowns in the second period an dthen put the Shibe Park crowd of 33,707 into a carnival mood with their three easy touchdowns against a crumbling Redskins team in the fourth period.

The Eagles scored three touchdowns on passes — two from aerials tossed by Tommy Thompson and Bill Mackrides, their own quarterbacks, and a third on a pass from Baugh.

Steve Van Buren climaxed a 70-yard excursion with a four-yard scoring burst for another Eagles' touchdown and John Green, a defensive end, chipped in still another 6-pointer by stepping two yards across the goal line with a Baugh fumble.

Justice Sprints 71 Yards

The Redskins blew their chances for an upset—they were 17-point underdogs—in the first quarter shortly after Dudley's 15-yard 3-pointer climaxed a drive which started from their own 31-yard line.

Near the end of the period, Two-Choos Justice streaked 71 yards down the sidelines to the Eagles' 9-yard line, where Green finally flagged him. On the next play, however, Bob Goode, attempting to lateral to Dudley, fumbled and the Eagles recovered. The Redskins threatened only once after that.

Led by the passing of Tommy Thompson, whose precision pitches down the middle ate up huge chunks of yardage, the power-run-

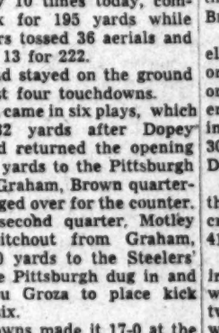
For Play Against Duke

Maryland's Rowden Player of the Week

CENTER JAKE ROWDEN, of Maryland, one of those unsung defensive players who doesn't do anything but make a nuisance of himself to the opposition, is The Washington Post's and Touchdown Club's College Player of the Week.

The 24-year-old senior from Duncan, Ariz., a varsity linebacker for the Terps since his freshman year, played one of his best games in his team's 26-14 victory over Duke Saturday.



Jake Rowden

"Big Jake," as teammates call their 195-pound co-captain, was especially brilliant on one series of downs when Duke had a first down on the Maryland 5-yard line early in the third quarter with Maryland leading, 19-7.

Fullback Mounie, on two cracks at tackle, made only 1-yard as Rowden plowed in from his backer-up position to smear him. On third down, Rowden crashed through the Duke line and spilled Mounie for a 3-yard loss, forcing them to throw a fourth down pass which was batted down in the end zone.

Seconds before, Rowden had caught Duke's fleet tailback, Bill Cox, from behind and spilled him on the Terps' 5-yard line after Cox had fled 54 yards through the Marylanders.

Midway the fourth period, Rowden teamed with Guard Bobby Ward and Dave Cianelli, another linebacker, to almost half another Duke touchdown drive. In three plays from the Maryland 6, the Dukes could gain only 4 yards against Rowden & Co. On fourth down, however, Mounie sped around end for the touchdown, a bare step ahead of Rowden who had again broken through and almost nailed Mounie for a loss.

Rowden played center for Jim Tatum when the present Maryland mentor coached the Jacksonville Naval Air Station team in 1945.

He enrolled in Maryland in 1946 and played varsity center weighing only 168 pounds. He's fattened up since then and now weighs 195. "Clean living and hard tackling did it," Rowden explained.

Baugh Has Bad Day and Redskins Lose

ning of Van Buren and the fancy, speedy slants of Frankie Ziegler, the Eagles bolted into a 7-3 lead early in the second period on Van Buren's smash-over tackle.

A Thompson-to-Jack Myers pass for 39 yards brought the ball to the Redskins' 15-yard line and three plays later Cliff Patton was kicking the first of his five extra points as Van Buren crashed over.

Two minutes later the Redskins gambled and lost and the Eagles seized the opportunity to go 62 yards in four plays for a touchdown.

Goode couldn't make the 2 yards needed for a first down on fourth down and the Eagles took over on their own 38. On third down, Thompson pitched a 39-yarder to End Pete Pihos for another Eagles' touchdown. Pihos leaped between Hall Haynes and Harry Dowda to catch the ball and then barreled over the remaining 6 yards for the score to give the Eagles their 14-3 halftime lead.

Trailing by only 14-3 with only eight minutes left to play, the Redskins, who had been battered by the massive, punishing Eagles line all day, began to fall apart. Baugh, who had to play the entire second half as Gilmer nursed a bruised shoulder, was running for his life trying to pass.

He attempted a short flip to Goode and completed it to Joe Muha, Eagles' defensive fullback, instead, and the former VMI star raced 16 yards for the first of the two quick 6-pointers in the fatal fourth quarter.

Thirty-eight seconds later, the Eagles increased their margin to 28-3, and again Baugh was the victim. Trying to pass from his own 11-yard line, Baugh had the ball knocked from his hands by Jay McDowell, rugged defensive end for the rugged Eagles, and ever-present Green picked it up on the Redskins' 2-yard line and walked across the goal.

But that didn't end the rapid rout, as the Eagles scored again two minutes later.

Baugh was once again the victim. He essayed a long pass down field and Frank Reagan, the old Penn star, grabbed it in and raced 47 yards to the Redskins' 20-yard line where 36-year-old Sammy Baugh himself finally tackled him.

On the second play, Mackrides passed to rookie Halfback Toy Ledbetter, who gave Bill Dudley the slip on the 5-yard line, for a touchdown in the end zone.

The Eagles did not score any more but they didn't need any more because there were only 16 seconds left, hardly time enough for the Redskins to come up with five touchdowns.

Army Meets Penn

Unbeaten SMU Runs Into Texas in Week's Top Game

By John Chandler

NEW YORK, Oct. 29 (AP).—Only nine major college football teams could sport unbeaten and untied records today after a busy Saturday that saw three perfect marks go splashing down the drain.

Now, with only four more weeks of the season left, the big question is how many of the nine will survive the rigors of the unpredictable pigskin game.

Cornell, Northwestern and Wichita found that all wasn't a bed of roses last Saturday. This week, several other teams riding high in the top 10 of the country will get the test of their young lives.

For instance, take the meeting between unbeaten Southern Methodist and Texas at Austin, or the Pacific Coast Conference fracas between unbeaten California and Washington at Seattle. The Rose Bowl may be the prize for the winner of the Seattle game.

Then there's high-riding Army facing dangerous Pennsylvania in the East's biggest attraction at Philadelphia.

As of the moment, the unbeaten and untied ranks show only Southern Methodist, the No. 1 team last week, the No. 2 team Army, Oklahoma in the No. 3 spot, Kentucky, No. 4, California, No. 6, Miami of Florida, No. 11, Princeton, Wyoming and Loyola of Los Angeles.

Princeton bounced Cornell out of the lofty clouds, 27-0. Wisconsin, beaten only by Michigan, came back to dunk Northwestern, 14-13. Houston University poured it on Wichita, 46-6. Northwestern was No. 9 and Cornell No. 10 last week, in the AP poll.

As for the big boys whose records remain untarnished, Army shut out Columbia, 34-0, Oklahoma stopped Iowa State, 20-7, Kentucky took Georgia Tech, 28-14, California outscored St. Mary's, 40-35, Wyoming mauled New Mexico, 44-0, Miami blanked Pittsburgh, 28-0, and Loyola of Los Angeles defeated Nevada, 34-7.

Southern Methodist, winner over Rice a week ago, 42-21, had an open date and rested. The Mustangs probably will need it, since Texas will be loaded for SMU this week. Texas showed it will be plenty tough by defeating Rice Saturday, 35-7. The Longhorns, beaten only by Oklahoma, could go a long way toward the Cotton Bowl by tripping SMU. Texas was No. 7 in last week's poll.

Yablonski Scores Once, Kicks 5 Pts.

CHICAGO, Oct. 29 (AP). — Two recovered fumbles in the third period touched off deciding touchdown payoffs today as the Chicago Cardinals knocked the New York Giants from a top ranking in the National Football League with a 17-3 upset triumph.

The Giants, who gained prominence by spilling the strong Cleveland Browns twice, absorbed their second loss in six starts and dropped to third place in the American Conference of the league.

Philadelphia took over first by whipping Washington, and Cleveland moved into second by trouncing Pittsburgh. The Cardinals remained in fourth spot with a 3-3 record.

Ray Poole, New York end, failed on 43 and 38-yard field goal attempts before connecting on an easy 12-yard boot late in the second to give the Giants a 3-0 halftime lead. The Giants, supported by Forrest Griffith's 18-yard run and Travis Tidwell's 21-yard toss to Bob McChesney, had drilled 75 yards before Poole's placement.

Eddie Price's fumble, recovered on the Giants' 45 by Garrard Ramsey, set up the first Cardinal touchdown at the outset of the third. Jim Hardy passed seven and eight yards to Rookie Fran Polsfoot of Washington State and finally speared Bob Shaw for a 31-yard payoff. Ventan Yablonski added the first of two extra points. He also booted a 17-yard field goal in the fourth.

Later in the third, Ray Apolskis fell on Griffith's fumble to give the Cards possession on their own 43. Charlie Trippi slammed 19 yards, Hardy passed 21 to Shaw and Yablonski rammed the last 17 for a touchdown.

Tripucka Has Head Injury

CHICAGO, Oct. 29 (AP).—Frank Tripucka, Chicago Cardinals quarterback, was reported recovering after suffering a head injury in the Cards-New York Giants professional football game today.

A spokesman at St. Bernard's Hospital, where the former Notre Dame star was taken, said Tripucka had regained full consciousness after being brought to the hospital from Comiskey Park in a dazed condition.

The spokesman said Tripucka was not believed seriously hurt, although X-rays will be taken to determine full extent of the head injury.

Mathews has three broken ribs. Cone's injury, though serious, may heal within two weeks if all goes well, Milford said.

Stands In for Everyone But Father

Harry Stuhldreher, Jr., Chips in With Frosh While Waiting to Be Eligible at Michigan

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Oct. 29 (AP).—This lad from the University of Michigan specializes in the playing the part of other people on the football field.

So far this season, he's played Michigan State's Al Dorow, Dartmouth's Johnny Clayton, Army's Bob Blaik, Wisconsin's Bob Petruska, and Minnesota's Bob Gelle.

And he would probably play Hamlet if Coach Bennie Oosterbaan asked him.

That's Harry "Skip" Stuhldreher, jr., a pint-sized example of what makes football the game it is.

Son of the immortal who quarterbacked Notre Dame's famed Four Horsemen, young Stuhldreher's football hopes were dashed temporarily when his work in Michigan's tough conservation school fell inches short and he was marked ineligible for varsity competition this fall.

"Skip" swallowed his heartbreak and asked Oosterbaan for permission to work out with the freshman squad.

His willingness, skill and enthusiasm has made him a key, of sorts, to Michigan's 1950 conference hopes.

For the 172-pound 5-foot 7-inch Madison, Wis., lad has become the Wolverine interpreter of the enemy's aerial offense. He studies the scout reports, confers with the scouts, then plays the role of the enemy passer.

His efficiency in this role has served to bring improvement to the Michigan defenses. Stuhldreher's test occasionally is tougher than the opponents.

His left-handed throws are accurate and he has the knack of tossing where the receiver can best make the catch, considering the position of defensemen and the speed of the runner.

"Certainly, he's a good thrower," said Oosterbaan flatly, "he gives the varsity a good workout practically every day."

He throws both short and long with the same accuracy and coolness. Michigan's improving pass defense can thank Stuhldreher for its increasing efficiency.

Some believe his size is a factor against his eventual varsity contribution.

"If you can't see over 'em, you can't throw over 'em," they say.

But stubby players have made it before. Especially when they had the combination of ability and enthusiasm that young Stuhldreyer possesses.

He's working toward that end now. He's not sacrificing his studies for football. He's bearing down on his school work to erase his ineligibility so that he can take his place with the varsity candidates when the 1951 season opens.

way for two Brown touchdowns in the third quarter. Ken Gorgal picked up one of Joe Geri's tosses on his own 31. After one play failed to gain, Motley stormed through guard on the Browns' famed trap play for 69 yards and a score.

Late in the period, Jim Martin intercepted one of Gage's tosses on the Steeler 34 and four plays later Phelps whirled 14 yards through tackle across the goal line.

The Steelers' lone touchdown came on a lightning thrust as the fourth period opened. Joe Gasparella, passing 51 yards to Lynn Chandnois to the Browns' 29, followed up with a touchdown pass to Gage, the two plays covering 80 yards for the score.

The Browns took to the airways for their last two counters, Graham passing to Dub Jones for an 80-yard scoring play after Warren Lahr had intercepted a Chandnois pass in the end zone for a touchback.

Cliff Lewis passed 38 yards to Horace Gillom for the final score. Lou Groza kicked all six conversions for the Browns while Geri converted for the Steelers.

Branch Rickey Meets Today With DeWitt of Browns

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 29 (U.P.).—Branch Rickey was expected to arrive here tonight for a mystery-shrouded conference with President Bill DeWitt of the St. Louis Browns.

Rickey, who sold his quarter interest in the Brooklyn club for an estimated $1,025,000 last week, is reliably reported to have already accepted the general manager's post with the Pittsburgh Pirates.

DeWitt turned aside all questions about the topic of tomorrow's conversation with Rickey.

"So far as I know, he's coming here to visit his daughter, Mrs. Rickey is making the trip with him and it's to be a family reunion."

Don Bowman, Cooper Fight Here Tonight

Although he's a Sunday school teacher, Don Bowman of Asheville, N. C., doesn't turn the other cheek when struck, Jimmy Cooper, the District's leading featherweight, probably will learn in a scheduled 10-round fight at Turner's Arena tonight.

The young North Carolinian already has whipped two local scrappers, Danny Petre and Pat Thomas, in Southern rings, where he is a big favorite, and will be making his Washington debut.

Bowman has won 47 of 56 fights since turning pro late in 1946, 19 by knockouts. He has fought 14 times this year, winning 11 and scoring 4 kayoes.

Despite Bowman's record, Cooper is rated a 6-to-5 favorite. Cooper has dropped only two fights in the past 12 months, one to Charlie Titone, and one to Gataene Analera, of Italy, some months ago in Madison Square Garden.

Tonight's five-round semifinal brings back Connie Wilkins and Chink Williams, local lightweights, who fought three weeks ago.

Four four-round preliminaries list Charley Bennett vs. Jimmy Briscee, lightweights; Abe Kaiser vs. Kid Toy, welters, Young Satan vs. Clarence Hinnant, welters, and Jackie Earle vs. Chunkie Johnson, lightweights.

Players of Week, Addie Honored By Touchdowners

Bob Addie, Times-Herald sports columnist who is being recalled to active duty again in the Air Force Wednesday, will receive a send-off at the Touchdown Club weekly luncheon today.

John Steelman, assistant to the President, will be guest speaker. Master of ceremonies is John H. (Bo) Rowland, GW coach.

Players of the week chosen by the Touchdwon Club and The Washington Post who will be honored include Center Jake Rowden, Maryland University; Guard Lester Scott, GW High, of Alexandria, and Somerville (Spud) Parker, St. Albans.

Paterson Comes From Behind to Beat Richmond

PATERSON, N. J., Oct. 29 (AP).—The Paterson Panthers came rearing back against Richmond in the fourth quarter of an American League football game today to pull what appeared to be a hopeless defeat out of the fire, 24-16.

Paterson trailed 16-7 going into the final frame, but Quarterback Paul Campbell sparked a 75-yard march in five plays, with Bob Sanders going over from the 5-yard line. Scarcely two minutes later, the Rebels were forced to kick, and Paterson's Ken Sinofsky broke through and blocked Lynn Chewning's punt, giving the Panthers the ball on Richmond's 10. This proved the clincher when Campbell sneaked over three plays later from the 1-foot line.

'Crazy as a Loon?' Just Ask a Sea Gull

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

THE HONEYMOON is over for radio sports guys who in the past have taken some liberties by covering up mistakes with fast talk. Smart parlor guys are now watching the action on TV and tuning in the radio commentary and flaws are showing up. This method is separating the men from the boys, if you know what I mean. . . . Dagmar, the great, big beautiful doll on Jerry Lester's Broadway Open House (TV) show, has been voted All-American eye-full by the boys in the Laurel pressbox. . . . The year's biggest bet was not cashed at a race track but on the tennis court where Gussie Moran parlayed a few lace stitches into 75 grand while many of us were losing our shirts on the nags. . . . In contrast to seasons when it had several of the Nation's topflight horses, Calumet Farm has only one 1950 candidate for the "Horse of the Year"—Ponder . . . Will the Army-Navy game go nautical this season? Middie supporters say that Navy always was good defensively against the Cadets and this year the Tars also have a scoring punch . . . Don't tell Jim Magner, Touchdown Club president and restaurant man, but we found a grammatical error on one of the table cards at Ted Lewis' eatery the other night.

HAIGHT

"CRAZY AS A LOON" is a commonly used expression but it was not until recently that I found its origin. Seagulls fluttering over the water are the signal to anglers that striped bass or blues are present. The birds feed on remnants of the bait fish. While trolling near Solomons Island we spotted a concentration of thousands of gulls and put on full speed ahead to get to the scene. As we approached, the captain shook his head and sighed, "Just some darn waloons." The waloon is a sharp-billed bird, a cross between the duck and gull families. He dives and brings up minnows and mussels. In order to swallow this food the waloon tosses it in the air. It is at this point the gulls swoop down and almost invariably get the tidbits—hence, "Crazy As a Loon" . . . After the horse Paraldehyde won at Laurel last week, a bettor said "I couldn't bet a horse named for that stuff the undertakers use. I thought he'd be a dead one." After much search I find it means, "a hypnotic drug which crystalizes at 10 degrees Fahrenheit," as if anybody cared.

IN A RECENT column I read with interest about Georgetown's 3-2 football victory over Temple some years ago. The piece went to great length to describe how the sun was setting and it was getting dark as Augie Lio booted the winning field goal. First time I ever heard of the sun's setting at 11:15 p. m., even in Philadelphia. It was a night game. . . . Members of two of Chesapeake Bay's foremost fishing guide families met for the first time last week when I introduced Harry Manifold, of Deale, Md., to Leon Langley, of Solomons Island. Langley, after 25 years of successfully captaining fishing parties, went out as a customer—and didn't catch a fish. . . . Could the Government's ban on building of sports structures cause a radical change in the Maryland Jockey Club's plans? Will it concentrate on Laurel, instead of selling the track in order to finance rebuilding of Pimlico? Ezzard Charles made more friends with his from-the-heart remarks on TV than he did when he whipped Joe Louis. By the way, we can look for a ban on immediate post-fight radio and TV speeches by participants. Rocky Graziano went a bit berserk, remember? Put two men together and let them punch each other around for a half hour and they are apt to say anything on the spur of the moment. Wrestler Laverne Baxter, who tore out the microphone wires and chased TV Commentator Jimmy Gibbons at Turner's Arena the other night, isn't always acting. I found that out one night when I entered the dressing room unannounced and found him punching with Lord Carlton.

Roosevelt Must Win to Stay in Race

By Bill Gilbert

The Interhigh League season hits the home stretch this week, and, after Friday's games, the title picture should come in to sharper focus.

In Friday's contests, McKinley Tech entertains Roosevelt with a chance to clinch the Group II title, while Coolidge is at Eastern. Both games start at 3 p. m.

It's the last league game for Roosevelt, which has split even in four starts. A Tech triumph would not only eliminate Roosevelt, but also Coolidge, regardless of the Colt's outcome against Eastern, since Coolidge has won only one game and lost two. Tech would have seven points with a game left with Bell, while Coolidge, if it wins, would have only four points and a game with Bell.

With two weeks remaining, Eastern and Anacostia are tied for the lead in Group I with three victories and a tie each for seven points. McKinley Tech's Trainers are getting the pace in Group II with 2-0-1 and five points.

The Group I champion will meet the Group II titleholder November 22 in the championship game sponsored by the board of education, The Washington Post and the Touchdown Club. In the point system used to figure the final standings, teams are awarded two points for a win and one for a tie.

Eastern, if it whips the Colts, would go one up on idle Anacostia with four wins and a tie, good for nine points. Eastern's game after Friday is with Western, while Anecostia must take on Western and Wilson.

AT LAUREL

DEAR FOLKS:

The Saturday crowd witnessed a big day for Apprentice Jockey David Evors, who rode the first winner of his career aboard Walter's Boy. The bad actor threw him at the gate, but the youngster, who was up for the fourth time, climbed back in the saddle and put up a rousing finish. He is 20 and from Jacksonville, Fla. Charles Town entries for the December meeting will close at 9 a. m., an hour earlier than usual. With three days to go, Augustino Catalano seems a cinch to take jockey honors. He has 17 winners. Jimmy McGee and A. F. East are tied for leading trainer with three winners each. Favorites, which were off to a slow start here, have picked up and are now batting .333. See you on the rail—BILL.

W&L Holds Lead in Conference

RICHMOND, Va., Oct. 29 (AP).—Washington and Lee's Generals, who gained prestige yesterday in losing to Tennessee, today found themselves alone on top of the Southern Conference standings and in a ripe spot to grab the circuit crown.

The Generals can sew up the title by beating winless Virginia Tech next Saturday and the University of Richmond November 23. If W&L takes these two, the Generals will be "in" for the first time since 1934. A loss likely would leave Clemson's once-tied Tigers the conference champion.

Wake Forest's Deacons and Duke's Blue Devils both had a chance until yesterday. Clemson edged the Deacons, 13-12. Maryland, upset a week ago by North Carolina State, took care of Duke, 26-14.

Clemson's close victory elevated the Tigers into second place with a record of two wins and one tie and left Wake Forest in third. Duke tumbled to fourth place.

Washington and Lee, charged with being one of the better "poor" teams, showed its critics yesterday by scaring eighth-ranked Tennessee before bowing to the Volunteers, 27-20.

Bullis Prep Loses First Game, 21 to 7

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Oct. 29.—Bullis Prep of Washington, D. C., lost its first football game of the season here today, dropping a hard-fought, 21-7, contest to Aquinas before 20,189 spectators.

Jim Campagna scored in the first quarter for Aquinas, intercepting a Bullis pass and returning it to the Bullis 26-yard line. Six running plays took it to the 1, where Jim Burns bulled over.

Leo Speros put Bullis back into the game with an 81-yard off-tackle touchdown jaunt in the same period, and the half ended, 7-7. Bullis got what looked like a lucky break in the third quarter when Aquinas fumbled on the Bullis 9. Bullis fumbled on its own 5 on the next play, however, and Campagna went over for a touchdown. Campagna scored again in the fourth quarter, capping a 71-yard drive.

U.S. Cash Will Aid State Health Work

States and territories will get a $114,206,100 shot in the arm for public health services for the fiscal year 1951, Oscar R. Ewing, Federal Security Administrator, announced yesterday.

The agency's Public Health Service is distributing the money appropriated by Congress for eight programs of health assistance to the States.

The programs are: General health, including aid to States for local services—$13,540,500; tuberculosis control — $6,350,000; venereal disease control—$10,390,600; cancer control—$3,200,000; mental health—$3,200,000; heart disease control—$1,700,000; hospital construction—$75 million, industrial waste (water pollution) studies—$825,000.

Dr. Leonard A. Scheele, surgeon general, said the main burden of providing health services rests on the communities and the States, but through grants-in-aid, the Federal Government joined the public health effort.

Last year Federal grants provided about 20 percent of the Nation's investment in public health services. The money is distributed on the basis of population, income per capita, and individual health problems.

Payments are made to those States with approved plans for use of grant funds on the basis of the State's request for funds. This year only one State has not yet developed a mental health program and only two have not yet begun to participate in heart disease control and prevention programs.

Charterite Hits Slurs On Council

The Montgomery County Charter Committee quickly—and emphatically—struck back yesterday at Democratic charges that the charter movement had not done a good job.

Allen H. Gardner, member of the committee's board of directors, issued a lengthy statement in reply to a declaration made by H. Deets Warfield, a member of the original County Charter Board, at a Democratic rally at Damascus Saturday.

Warfield said he was going to vote a straight Democratic ticket November 7 and criticized the County Council for having "tried to cram too much reform into too short a time."

Gardner's statement termed the Warfield speech an "excoriation" of the County Council on behalf of the Democratic "machine."

"What the excoriation did not say was what services are to be discontinued and what offices are to be reduced in personnel. One may suspect, judging from heavy past contributions to the same machine by certain real estate developers and allied interests, that the road construction code is to be emasculated, poor roads foisted on the county, rezoning made easy and other special favors conferred on favored developers," Gardner declared.

GU Honors Japanese Jurist

Dr. Paul Francis Kotaro Tanaka, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Japan, yesterday received the honorary degree of doctor of laws at Georgetown University's annual graduate school convocation.

The degree was conferred by the Very Rev. Hunter Guthrie, S.J., university president.

Judge E. Barrett Prettyman of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia delivered the convocation address and discussed the responsibility that has befallen Chief Justice Tanaka and his fellow jurists in Japan since the adoption of the new constitution.

"You gentlemen must write," he said, "in the history of your great people, the success or failure of the great project upon which they have embarked: That law, the spiritual restraint which makes men free, may govern in your land."

Dr. Tanaka, a convert to Catholicism, is touring the United States with other members of the Japanese high court to study the American judicial system.

Shure's Piano Recital an Imposing Triumph

Postlude

By Paul Hume

Leonard Shure won himself an imposing personal triumph in a difficult situation yesterday afternoon.

The young American pianist played a recital in Constitution Hall, replacing Rudolf Serkin, who injured his right thumb while playing in Chicago last week.

Shure, taking the assignment at short notice, opened a series of recitals to be given by five of the biggest names in the piano business today. He stands with any of them, and ahead of some.

His recital was uncompromising in that it made no polite bows in the direction of what the public knows and is said to like.

Shure has gifts of personal magnetism in his playing that place his musicianly work on a level reached by few artists today. His technique is such that one can forget about all problems and concentrate on what the artist is saying.

In Brahms' Opus 116 Fantasies this is a tremendous accomplishment. These three capriccios and four intermezzos are not often played. They, like much Brahms for piano, demand a big technique, easy command of wide stretches, and mastery of the subtlest arts of pianism.

Shure is a master of the pedal, delights with a singing tone of unusual beauty, and supports everything he does with the soundest understanding.

It was a great recital. Surely the Hayes management owes so rare an artist a regularly announced program of his own on next year's piano series.

The piano also dominated last night's fourth Coolidge Festival program in the Library of Congress.

Three quartets for piano and strings were played by a new ensemble called the New York Quartet. Their famous names include Alexander Schneider, violinist; Milton Katims, violist; Hermann Busch, cellist substituting for Frank Miller, and Mieczyslaw Horsowski, pianist.

Busch, completing his taxing assignment of taking over all cello work for the festival, deserves highest credit for his fine efforts. It is no discredit to him that we hope to be able to hear the quartet shortly with their original membership.

In any program of music devoted to these instruments, the piano, by reason of tone and technique, tends to dominate. Horszowski is one of the world's wizards in his field.

He was as astounding in the new quartet of Aaron Copland as in the Mozart and Brahms surrounding it.

3000 Attend Post Children's Book Fair

By Melvin Altshuler
Post Reporter

It would be hard to say whether kids or adults got more fun yesterday out of The Washington Post's Children's Book Fair.

The kids had just the books to look at.

The adults had both the books and the sight of the young fry enjoying them.

When a youngster in the picture book departments found a volume that entranced him, he'd slowly settle to the marble floor of the Department of Commerce lobby.

He would then cross his legs under him, prop the book on his lap and thumb through with raptness.

When an adult in the classics department saw a copy of "Black Beauty" or "Treasure Island," he would turn to a remembered page and smile happily.

It went that way yesterday with the 3000 or so children and adults who visited the opening day of the fair, held under the auspices of the Sesquicentennial Commission.

Most of the interest centered around the "Animals—Fact and Fiction" and hobby sections.

The hit of them all seemed to be a question-and-answer book

Fireman Hits At Manager For Fairfax

Adoption of a county-manager government for Fairfax County would "seriously endanger the continuous efficiency of the police and fire departments," a spokesman for the Committee to Retain Representative Government, declared yesterday.

William J. Barber, vice chairman of the committee and himself a volunteer fireman, said a changeover to the county-manager form will "decidedly alter" the functions of the two departments. Both departments, he declared, have records unequaled in the greater Washington area.

Barber said the present governmental system provides for appointment of policemen by an impartial circuit court judge.

Through this appointive method, he asserted, policemen "owe allegiance to no one except the public and are completely removed from partisan politics."

Toll for Weekend Shows 3 Victims; Arlington Cyclist Injured in Crash

Three pedestrians' legs were bdoken on the weekend in separate accidents. An Arlington youth also sustained a fractured leg in an auto-bicycle accident yesterday.

The pedestrian casualty list started at 5:45 p. m. Saturday when Dixon Gwyn, 59, 1923 17th st. nw., was struck by an auto operated by Frank M. Kochanowicz, 32, 1746 Lanier pl. nw.

Police said Gwyn had been crossing in the 1800 block of 18th st. nw. in mid-block. He was admitted to Freedmen's Hospital with a compound fracture of the right leg. His condition was good.

About 8 p.m. Henry Kinard, 41, 70 F st. sw., was struck by an auto driven by Robert C. Perry, 33, 2836 South Buchanan st., Arlington, police said.

Police reported Kinard stepped off a streetcar loading platform at Wisconsin ave. and Macomb st. nw. into the path of the Perry vehicle. He was admitted to Georgetown Hospital in serious condition with fractures of the hip, upper left leg, right ankle and scalp lacerations.

Ninety minutes later, Mrs. Martha Ambush, 62, 637 Elliott st. ne., was struck by a truck operated by James W. Keyes, 35, 117 53rd st. ne., in the 700 block of

Jewish Conference Votes 4-Point Plan

The National Planning Conference for Israel and Jewish Rehabilitation yesterday unanimously adopted a four-point program to provide one billion dollars to Israel in the next three years.

Emphasizing that Israel faces a "desperate financial situation," the conference also took unanimous action in urging Jewish communities to make available 50 million dollars in cash to the United Jewish Appeal by December 31, 1950.

The conference agreed the billion dollars should be raised as follows:

1. From the U. S. Government through grants in aid, loans and "through other avenues of financial support that have been mobilized by our Government to further the cause of democracy everywhere."

2. From the United Jewish Appeal.

3. By the government of Israel floating a public loan in the United States.

4. By encouraging private investments in Israel by American business interests.

The resolution was passed yesterday in the closing session of a four-day conference at the Statler Hotel to discuss a 1½-million-dollar three-year economic development program for Israel.

Israel already has announced its readiness to assume responsibility for 500 million dollars toward the program "to make possible the immigration, absorption and resettlement of 600,000 homeless Jews from eastern Europe, North Africa and Moslem countries."

Blood Trail Brings Arrest In Slaying

Police were unable immediately to identify Frederick Windear, 20, when they discovered his body at the corner of Sixth and O sts. nw. But they followed the blood trail to 1336 Sixth st. nw., where he lived on the second floor. His uncle, Alfred Windear, 55, lived on the third floor, where the trail ended.

The elder Windear, located at a house nearby, told police Frederick had been drinking, had forced the door to his room and then started an argument. Police said Windear had been stabbed in the neck with a butcher knife.

Alfred Windear, charged with murder, will appear at a coroner's inquest today at 1 p. m.

3000 Attend Post Children's Book Fair

By Melvin Altshuler

It would be hard to say whether kids or adults got more fun yesterday out of The Washington Post's Children's Book Fair.

The kids had just the books to look at.

The adults had both the books and the sight of the young fry enjoying them.

When a youngster in the picture book departments found a volume that entranced him, he'd slowly settle to the marble floor of the Department of Commerce lobby.

He would then cross his legs under him, prop the book on his lap and thumb through with raptness.

When an adult in the classics department saw a copy of "Black Beauty" or "Treasure Island," he would turn to a remembered page and smile happily.

It went that way yesterday with the 3000 or so children and adults who visited the opening day of the fair, held under the auspices of the Sesquicentennial Commission.

Most of the interest centered around the "Animals—Fact and Fiction" and hobby sections.

The hit of them all seemed to be a question-and-answer book with a "magic" pencil. Touch the right answer in the book with the battery-powered pencil and the top lights up.

One kid would try it, another would slide up with a covetous look at the book, and a small crowd would develop.

About an hour after the show opened, the batteries went bad.

Each day of the six-day exhibit will have a special feature. Yesterday was a toy theater presentation of "Aladdin's Lamp."

About 30 youngsters, average age about 6, and half as many adults piled into a darkened corridor for performances.

Outside the timetable for these performances, there was nothing rigid about the Fair.

Everything was informal: books easily within reach on tables or stands, and not a "Do Not Touch" sign in the place. Guides were present to answer questions.

The books on display, incidentally, are not for sale.

Not all the adults at the opener yesterday were parents. Some were librarians and teachers and others concerned with the selection of books for youngsters. They could be spotted easily by their notebooks, busily jotting down the titles of the 1200 books they thought important.

One librarian explained the basis of her selections. Kids, she said, are particular about their preferences. Books must not be too heavy—that's one guide; they must have large type; they must be illustrated.

Book Fair to Continue Through Friday

The Washington Post Children's Book Fair will continue through Friday in the Department of Commerce lobby. There is no admission charge.

The Fair Monday through Thursday will be open from 8:30 to 5 p.m. Hours Friday are 8:30 a.m. to 9 p.m.

The Children's Book Guild, a Washington organization, will arrange special programs each day of the fair, graded for age groups from kindergarten to the sixth grade and beyond.

Fireman Hits At Manager For Fairfax

Adoption of a county-manager government for Fairfax County would "seriously endanger the continuous efficiency of the police and fire departments," a spokesman for the Committee to Retain Representative Government, declared yesterday.

Barber said the present governmental system provides for appointment of policemen by an impartial circuit court judge.

Through this appointive method, he asserted, policemen "owe allegiance to no one except the public and are completely removed from partisan politics."

Barber said the county manager system would provide for appointment by the manager—"a virtual czar empowered to hire and fire at will."

"Under a county manager, where would the allegiance of policemen be found?" Barber asked.

In the present governmental system, Barber said, the fire department is self-governed. Its governing board is made up of one member from each company, democratically chosen by the members themselves, he pointed out.

Barber said the county-manager system would place the fire department under indirect control of the county manager.

The drivers in the three accidents were not held by the police.

A newspaper delivery boy, William Rose, 12, 1913 10th rd., Arlington, was struck by a car while riding his bicycle in the 2000 block of Columbia pike, Arlington, about 7:45 a. m. yesterday. He was admitted to Arlington Hospital with a fractured right leg. His condition was good.

The driver of the car, Mary A. Draper, 26, 2130 S. Oakland st., Arlington, told police the youth cut in front of her vehicle. She was not held.

Heavy smoke from burning leaves was blamed for a head-on collision in the 5500 block of McKinley st., Bethesda, Saturday about 4 p. m. Wilbur LaRoe, sr., 87 5606 Roosevelt st. and Ferdinand Grabner, 51, 707 Bradley blvd., both of Bethesda, said the smoke blinded them.

LaRoe, a retired publisher, was treated for cuts at Suburban Hospital. He is the father of Wilbur LaRoe, jr., Washington attorney and former chairman of the District Parole Board.

DOWN BY THE RIVERSIDE—After bicycling, Audrey Bruder, 21, of 3841 Newark st. nw., and Darrel (Dusty) Cummings, 25, of 1337 21st st. nw., find a comfortable place to rest on the blanket of leaves along the river. The fisherman on the seawall adds a sports angle to this autumn idyll, which should repeat, leaves on the tree promise

The wonderfully mild weather that delighted Washington yesterday should last through today, at least.

Specifically, the Weather Bureau called for an afternoon high of 75 today—the same as it was yesterday.

There'll be a little fog during the morning but sunshine for the rest of the day.

As for yesterday, it was one of those unbelievable October days.

The high of 75 degrees came at 3:25 p. m. The low was a mild 54. There was sunshine and skies were clear.

The result was that Washingtonians and visitors turned out in force in the nearby Maryland and Virginia counties.

Although traffic was heavy, there were few serious accidents. Police said drivers were taking it easy—slowing down to look at the leaves.

Traffic in Rock Creek Park was medium—"nothing unusual for a nice Sunday," Park police reported.

The Zoo reported 40,000 attendance, most of the visitors coming in late afternoon.

Weather observers said the eastern United States was enjoying the same sort of weather.

Jewish Conference Votes 4-Point Plan

The National Planning Conference for Israel and Jewish Rehabilitation yesterday unanimously adopted a four-point program to provide one billion dollars to Israel in the next three years.

Emphasizing that Israel faces a "desperate financial situation," the conference also took unanimous action in urging Jewish communities to make available 50 million dollars in cash to the United Jewish Appeal by December 31, 1950.

The conference agreed the billion dollars should be raised as follows:

1. From the U. S. Government through grants in aid, loans and "through other avenues of financial support that have been mobilized by our Government to further the cause of democracy everywhere."

2. From the United Jewish Appeal.

3. By the government of Israel floating a public loan in the United States.

4. By encouraging private investments in Israel by American business interests.

The resolution was passed yesterday in the closing session of a four-day conference at the Statler Hotel to discuss a 1½-million-dollar three-year economic development program for Israel.

Israel already has announced its readiness to assume responsibility for 500 million dollars toward the program "to make possible the immigration, absorption and resettlement of 600,000 homeless Jews from eastern Europe, North Africa and Moslem countries."

Leon Keyserling, chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisors, principal speaker at the final session, echoed the confidence in the economic potential of Israel expressed at an earlier session by Secretary of the Treasury John W. Snyder.

Keyserling warned, however, it would be a misconception to believe that because Israel is ready to stand on her own feet economically, she can stand alone without the cooperation and aid of the United States.

He emphasized that Americans should welcome participation in the effort to build up the economic strength of Israel so it may make its most effective contribution to the preservation of peace.

The resolution calling for 50 million dollars in cash to the United Jewish Appeal also urged American Jewish communities to initiate their 1951 campaigns immediately after the conclusion of the conference. Under normal circumstances it would begin on January 1.

Among the avenues proposed for raising the cash were: payment of outstanding pledges of this and previous years' UJA campaigns; cash payments on account of forthcoming 1951 pledges; bank borrowings and loans from other Jewish organizations in communities which may have available funds not immediately needed.

Abba Eban, Israel Ambassador to the United States, and Rudolf G. Sonneborn, chairman of the board of directors of the United Palestine Appeal, also spoke at the concluding sessions of the conference.

G. C. Vietheer Appointed

George C. Vietheer, deputy director of personnel in the Commerce Department, has been appointed United States representative at the first session of the United Nations International Center for Public Administration, starting in New York Tuesday.

His companion, a 17-year-old Arlington, Va., youth, was turned over to juvenile authorities for further action.

Judaism Unit Has Panel on 'Nationalism'

Chapter leaders from ten Eastern cities yesterday concluded a two-day regional conference of American Council for Judaism.

The council is made up of Jews who believe that "nationality and religion are separate and distinct" and that the "nationalism of Israel must be confined to the boundaries of that state," according to its statement.

The final sessions yesterday included closed discussions on "How to Recognize 'Jewish Nationalism' in the Local Community" and "What to Do Abut 'Jewish Nationalism' in the Local Community."

Dr. William H. Fineshriber, a Philadelphia rabbi celebrating his fiftieth year in the rabbinate this month, told the group at a luncheon meeting that members of the council seek to inspire "a deeper understanding of the Jewish religion."

Small Fry Mimic Their Mothers

LITTLE GIRLS never seem to tire of imitating mother in even the most routine jobs. This makes Christmas shopping for the domestic little miss much easier because she will have so much more fun "helping" if she has the proper tools.

Part of the standard equipment would be a vacuum sweeper. Many different models are available in Washington's toy departments and stores, including a mechanical one that works like a hand sweeper. The brush will even pick up dust which can be emptied from the bottom. ($1.99).

An electric sweeper has a headlight and the bag fills with air when the sweeper is plugged into a wall outlet. It carries the seal of the Underwriters Laboratory ($9.95). There is also a musical carpet sweeper, pint sized, which plays "Whistle While You Work." (2.50). All are at Lansburgh's.

If mother's little assistant helps on washday, she would love a clothespin apron to wear. It comes with a tiny clothesline and miniature clothespins. (Play Center, Inc.—$1).

FOR BATHING a very young baby doll there is nothing like a bathinette similar to those used for real babies. Nearly every little girl has a doll with a washable body, and bathing the doll is a favorite pastime. The bathinettes have metal frames and waterproof tubs.

Some even include all the items necessary to keep the doll comfortable—sponge, wash cloth, soap, powder puff and cotton swabs. The swing-up table top for dressing the doll has a measuring scale to note the baby's growth. (F. A. O. Schwarz—$5.95).

A young hostess who likes to serve the best on her doll dishes will be delighted with some plastic food that looks almost good enough to eat. A box of food holds a well-balanced meal—a loaf of bread, two helpings of peas, and carrots, two ears of corn on the cob, two steaks, a roast chicken, rolls and two pieces of pie. (G. C. Murphy—98c).

When your Christmas gift list includes a toddler, finding just the right gift sometimes presents a problem. If he is just beginning to walk steadily he will enjoy a wooden "caterpillar" that will tag along most anywhere. This toy is made of colored cylinders which are pulled along by a cord.

It is a 15-inch jointed pull toy which will climb over objects and will buckle back and crawl over itself. Thus it will always be right side up and headed the same direction as the child. (Woodward & Lothrop—$1.25).

A RED METAL Jeep will delight a pre-school mechanic who wants to take an occasional look under the hood, which raises on this small edition of the popular vehicle. There is nothing inside but it makes a fine place to pretend fixing the motor or to hide especially treasured objects. (Kann's—$1.98).

An appropriate gift for a girl old enough to wear jewelry is a woven bracelet. A Mexican Indian palm and silk bracelet is done in subdued colors to go well with sweater and skirt combinations. (The Mexican Shop—49c).

Nothing will please a young carpenter more than a tool kit. A rubber set, including screwdriver, hammer, hatchet, S-wrench, saw and pliers, would be the safest. (Neisner's—69c). A metal set about the same size costs a quarter at G. C. Murphy's.

Move to Arkansas

Now making their home in Fayetteville, Ark., are Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Norfleet Carlisle, who were married September 6 in Hot Springs, Ark. Mrs. Carlisle is the former Miss Madge Wootton Westbrook, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Westbrook of Washington and San Angelo, Tex. Mr. Carlisle is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Raoul Carlisle of Forrest City, Ark.

Only 56 More Baking Days Until Xmas—Time Now to Get a Head Start

IT'S QUITE A WHILE 'til Christmas, but there are a few chores it's good to be previous about. One of them is fruit cake baking. Just how early to start is what's bothering Mrs. J. McC.

DEAR ANNE:

I am a beginner at baking but am very much interested in it and have turned out some cakes I was quite proud of. Now I'd like to tackle a fruit cake. How long before Christmas would you bake one if you wanted to moisten it with brandy, and what is your most satisfactory recipe? I would like to bake several in loaf pans for Christmas gifts.

Mrs. J. McC., Washington.

Opinions differ on the ideal age for fruit cake. You hear of cakes that have been kept for a year and are still delicious. Personally, I'd say a month's aging is ample for mingling and mellowing the flavors. Opinions also differ on what type of fruit cake is best—dark, light, or in-between. If you fancy a dark one, you'll find the following delicious:

DARK FRUIT CAKE

- 1½ cups sifted cake flour
- 2 teaspoons baking powder
- 1 teaspoon salt
- ½ teaspoon nutmeg
- ½ teaspoon mace
- ½ teaspoon cinnamon
- ¼ teaspoon allspice
- ¼ teaspoon cloves
- 1 cup shortening
- ½ cup sugar
- ½ cup light honey
- 5 eggs, well beaten
- 6 tablespoons orange juice
- ¼ pound candied lemon peel
- ¼ pound candied orange peel
- ¼ pound citron
- ½ pound candied pineapple
- ½ pound candied cherries
- ½ pound dates
- ½ pound raisins
- ¼ pound broken pecans
- ½ pound broken walnuts
- ½ cup sifted all-purpose flour

Sift together cake flour, baking powder, salt, and spices. Cream shortening until soft and smooth. Gradually add sugar and honey, beating until light and fluffy. Add eggs and beat thoroughly.

Add flour-spice mixture and orange juice, beating until smooth. Sprinkle the one-half cup of all-purpose flour over the fruits and nuts in a large bowl and mix until each piece is covered with flour. Add flour, fruits, and nuts to cake mixture and mix well.

Turn into pans which have been previously prepared by greasing thoroughly and lining with brown paper. Fill pan two-thirds full.

Bake in slow oven (300 degrees Fahrenheit) for approximately 2½ hours. When cool, the cake should be stored in tin boxes. You may leave the paper in which they were baked on them, or it may be removed and the cake wrapped in cheese cloth which has been saturated with sherry or brandy. Be sure to store in a cool place to prevent the formation of mold on the cake wrappings.

DEAR ANNE:

My husband insists that he has heard of a method of protecting window glass and automobile glass from the soapy pranks of youthful Halloweeners. If you know of any such liquid that can be adapted for this protection, many of us property owners will be grateful to you.

Mrs. R. L. R., Washington.

A thin film of light oil—such as salad oil—on the glass will make it difficult for these ghost writers to leave their mark. The oil will be easier to wash off than hard soap marks.

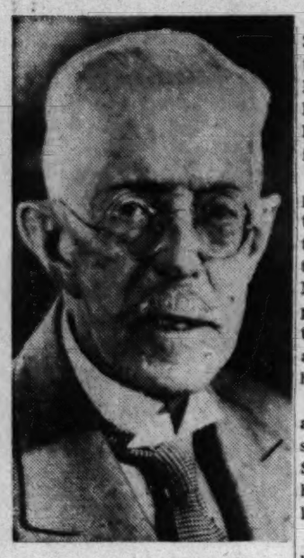
King Gustav Famous For Democratic Rule



Associated Press WIREPHOTO
KING GUSTAF V
... dies at 92

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, Oct. 29 (AP).—King Gustav V, who died this morning at Drottningholm Palace, was known for his singularly democratic rule, one of the longest in Europe and the longest in Swedish history..

Many Swedes credit King Gustaf personally with keeping their nation out of World War II even though the Germans had invaded the other Scandinavian countries, Norway and Denmark. He appealed to Hitler in a personal letter to respect Sweden's neutrality and the Nazi leader assured him he would do so.

Although he was trained as an active military commander himself, his proudest boast was that Sweden, once a warrior nation, had had no wars throughout his long reign.

His gaunt, six-foot figure (he weighed only 118 to 122 pounds) was familiar throughout the world. Tennis players all over Europe remember his participation in international matches under the name of "Mr. G."

He was past grand master of the Swedish Masons and an emeriti member of the Supreme Council, Thirty-third Degree, of the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite of Freemasonry, Southern Jurisdiction of the United States of America.

One of his hobbies was embroidery and needlework. Three of the ornate altar cloths he designed and executed were donated to Swedish churches in the United States—the Behlehem Evangelical Lutheran Church in Brooklyn, N. Y., the First Evangelical Lutheran Church in Worcester, Mass., and Old Swedes Church in Wilmington, Del.

King Gustaf was personally acquainted with much of Europe's history. He knew Queen Victoria and talked with Disraeli, her Prime Minister. He knew Bismarck, and the Russian czars, Alexander III and Nicholas II. He saw Emperor Franz Joseph of Austria-Hungary pass through the splendor of Vienna's great days. His queen, who died in 1930, was a cousin of Kaiser Wilhelm II of Germany.

He met Hitler three times and some who were present said that in 1933 he gave the Fuehrer a tongue-lashing for the Nazi policy of anti-Semitism. In 1944 he sent a personal appeal to Admiral Horthy, regent of Hungary, on the same subject, and opened Sweden's doors to thousands of persecuted Jews.

One of the great tragedies of his life was the 1947 airplane crash which killed his eldest grandson, then second in line of succession.

Lieut. Judge, Retired Navy Officer, Dies

Navy Lieut. John P. Judge (ret.), 78, of 4409 39th st. nw., who served aboard Dewey's flagship in the Battle of Manila Bay, died of a cerebral hemorrhage Saturday at Providence Hospital.

Lieutenant Judge, a native of Chicago, had lived in Washington since 1921. He retired from the Navy in 1935 after more than 40 years' service.

He served during the Mexican incidents of 1914, and in World War I served aboard a mine layer. He also sailed on tours with the Asiatic Fleet.

Lieutenant Judge was a member of St. Anne's Church and the church Holy Name Society, the Knights of Columbus, Catholic War Veterans and the Immaculate Conception chapter, Third Order of St. Dominic.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Mary Gabriel Judge; a son, Dr. Johnson Judge of Washington; two brothers, James and Joseph of Chicago; a sister, Mrs. Charles Wills of Chicago, and two grandchildren.

A requiem mass will be sung at 11 a. m. Wednesday at St. Anne's Church. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery. Members of the Third Order of St. Dominic will meet at 8:30 p. m. today at the Judge home for prayer and recitation of the rosary.

New King Knows U. S. Well; Visited Washington in 1926

NEW RULERS—This is the latest picture of Crown Prince Gustaf Adolf and Princes Louise, his wife. He will be sworn in as King today

STOCKHOLM, Oct. 29 (U.P.) — Sweden's new King Gustav VI has made two long visits to the United States and knows it better than any other crowned head and many chiefs of state in Europe today.

His first visit to the United States occurred in 1926. After unveiling a monument of John Ericsson in Potomac Park in Washington, D. C., and visiting the late President Calvin Coolidge, he and his wife, now Queen Louise, traveled from New York to San Francisco, making many intermediary stops.

In 1938, Gustaf and Louise returned for the New Sweden Tercentenary, celebrated in Delaware, New Jersey and Pennsylvania. This time they traveled through New England and again through the midwest, visting towns pioneered in the last century by Swedes.

His travels have brought him close to thousands of Americans and hundreds of thousands of Swedes.

All his life—he is 68—he has been preparing for the job as king.

The cabinet councils at which he will preside will not be new to him. On many occasions, when his father was ill or out of the country, he has served as regent.

The new king is an archeologist, a student of history and military science, and a skiier. He is a good golfer.

In 1905, he married Princess Margaret, daughter of the Duke and Duchess of Connaught. He was the first member of Swedish royalty to wed a member of the British royal family in more than 500 years.

They had four sons and one daughter: Ingrid, now Queen of Denmark; Gustaf Adolf, who died in a Copenhagen plane crash in 1947; Sigvard and Carl Johan, who married commoners and forfeited their rights to the throne, and Bertil, who is unmarried.

In 1920, Crown Princess Margaret died and three years later Gustaf Adolf married Lady Louise Mountbatten, sister of Earl Mountbatten of Burma, whose mother was a first cousin of King George VI.

He has won the coveted gold insignia of the Swedish Athletic Association. As late as World War II he took part in open walking competition. He is a marksman, an able horseman and owns a fishing lodge in the north of Sweden.

His grandson, 4-year-old Carl Gustaf, now becomes crown prince. The curly, blond-haired lad has been living in the largest room of the Victorian section of Drottningham Castle, where his great-grandfather died today.

The little prince was only 9 months old when his father died. Should the new King die before the crown prince is 18, Prince Bertil will act as regent. Should the little prince die or renounce his right to the throne, Bertil, born in 1912, will become King of Sweden.

Silent Film Star Costello Dies at 73

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 29 (U.P.)—Maurice Costello, 73, greatest lover of the silent screen, died today of a heart ailment.

Mr. Costello

The one-time matinee idol, father of actresses Dolores and Helen Costello, died at Cedars of Lebanon Hospital, where he had been confined more than two weeks. He was in a coma most of the time.

Mr. Costello, who earned and spent a million dollars during his long career, recently had been supported by relatives. He also was a bit player in films because "it's better to be a has-been than a never-was."

During the years between 1907 and 1917, the dashing, wavy-haired actor was known to millions of idolizing fans as "Curly" and "Dimples." He appeared with such stars as Norma and Constance Talmadge, Clara Kimball Young and Bebe Daniels.

His elder daughter, Dolores, once was married to the late John Barrymore, and Mr. Costello charged she was living comfortably off her alimony from the "Great Profile" while he was facing starvation. He sued her for $200 a month support in 1938, but they reconciled after she testified in court she was helping him financially.

Born in Pittsburgh, his full name was Maurice George Washington Costello.

Mr. Costello started his stage career at the age of 11 when he doubled as a printer's devil and stagehand-actor for an amateur company. He became a stage star via the stock company route.

30th Anniversary

Did You Know It's Radio-Video Week?

By Wayne Oliver

NEW YORK (AP).—Broadcasting observes its thirtieth anniversary this week as a giant that bears faint resemblance to the squawking, squealing infant of 1920.

The transmission of radio and television programs to the public is in itself a 500-million-dollar-a-year business and the foundation for a 3-billion-dollar-a-year industry if you include the manufacture and sale of sets.

But more than that, broadcasting has become in the short span of three decades a basic part of the American way of life, ranking with all the great inventions and developments of modern times.

It has made it possible for you to sit in your living room and over your radio listen direct to events in Europe and Asia, to performances by screen stars in Hollywood and symphony orchestras in New York. Or on a television screen you can watch events from Kansas City to Boston, from Minneapolis to Richmond, from Omaha to Jacksonville.

IN TRIBUTE to this 30-year-old prodigy, national radio and television week will be observed from Sunday through Saturday.

Like many other developments, broadcasting did not arrive on the scene suddenly and in full bloom so you could pick out an exact date on the calendar and say when it was born. But 1920 is regarded as the year when radio's function changed from one of communicating between two points to include that of broadcasts of music and information to all who might be listening.

As the year drew to a close, a few pioneer stations already were on the air on a regular basis, including WWJ of Detroit, KDKA of Pittsburgh and WHA of Madison, Wisc., along with experimental stations that were the predecessors of some of our other great stations.

The contrast between broadcasting then and now is tremendous.

One of the pioneer broadcasts was that of the Harding-Cox election returns in November 1920 over KDKA, a broadcast that was a sensation at the time.

It is believed that not more than 90 crystal sets, equipped with headphones, were tuned in to the historic broadcast.

AS THE 1950 general election approaches, this is the picture of broadcasting:

There are now 90 million radio sets in use, including automobile radios and portables.

There are 2189 standard radio stations on the air plus 675 Frequency Modulation stations.

There are 107 television stations on the air and 8,500,000 television sets in use.

Broadcasters have at least two billion dollars invested in those stations.

The public's investment in television sets is estimated at two and one-half billion dollars.

THE MANUFACTURING side of the industry, which turned out seven and one-half billion dollars of war materials during World War II, now is preparing to fill one and a half billion dollars in defense orders for delivery by the end of 1951 and a billion more for delivery after that date. But its capacity has been expanded so tremendously, it's expected there still will be a fairly ample supply of radio and television sets for the public.

Observance of radio and television week, sponsored jointly by the Radio-Television Manufacturers Association and the National Association of Broadcasters, will include a lot of reminiscing by old timers on the air. There will be a bit of pointing with justifiable pride during various programs.

And highlighting the observance will be the annual "Voice of Democracy" contest for high school students throughout the country. More than ont million students are expected to enter the contest. They will write speeches giving their personal ideas of how democracy works, and the best will be broadcast. The four finalists receive $500 college scholarships each.

Mr. Snyder's Personal Treasury Escaped Scot Free

Corinne Lewis of 3856 Florence dr., Alexandria, Va., passes along a wonderful story about the time George Lister came to Washington to visit Maj. Gen. Harry Vaughan.

Lister is a canny Scot who used to share an office with General Vaughan back in the old days in St. Louis, and of course when he arrived at the White House, the general gave him an old-home-week welcome.

At lunch time, they were joined by another old timer from Missouri, Secretary of the Treasury Snyder, and the three had a fine time swapping stories and reminiscing.

When it came time to pay the check, there was the usual round of no-this-one-is-on-me's, and they finally decided to match for it. Lister lost.

Picking up the tab and digging for his wallet, he murmured: "Weel, 'tis time I returrn'd to Scotl'nd and got tightened up again."

MILES VS. MINUTES

"I got pinched doing 45 miles an hour on the dual highway on the other side of the South Capitol st. bridge," reports an Army officer.

"I've got no complaint about the arrest. The limit is 30, and I was nabbed fair and square. But why must we have such a low speed limit on such a good stretch of highway? Most drivers in that area break the law."

I don't know whether "most" drivers speed there, but certainly many do. At times while hurrying to Rosecroft to lose my money on the trotters I've exceeded the limit myself, just keeping pace with the stream of traffic.

But Traffic Director George Keneipp says the disadvantages of raising the legal speed there outweigh the advantages.

The speed limit in the District is 25 miles per hour, except as otherwise posted (and except in school zones, playground zones, alleys and the like, which we can ignore for the purposes of this discussion).

The District Commissioners have the power to post higher legal speeds on certain streets, on recommendation of the Traffic Director's engineers. And in some cases they've gone as high as 30. But that's tops. For the time being, at least.

"I had an engineer check South Capitol st.," Keneipp tells me. "We could conceivably recommend a higher limit south of Firth Sterling ave., running as far as Overlook ave.

"But that's only a mile and a half, and a limit of 40 would save only 45 seconds. Even a limit of 50 would save only 72 seconds. Is it worth it?

"Besides, you can't have 50-mile-an-hour traffic suddenly blasting into a 25-mile zone. You've got to allow for slowing those cars down.

"Several years ago, Cannonball Baker put on a dramatic demonstration here, proving that speed doesn't pay. He drove 5 miles from Connecticut and Porter to First and Constitution, observing all traffic laws. His time was 18 minutes and 49 seconds.

"Then he drove the same course with no regard for speed limits, lights or any other traffic regulations. His time was 16 minutes and 59 seconds—but police estimated that he broke $2200 worth of laws doing it.

"I've got an open mind with regard to setting a precedent and recommending higher speed limits. But first you'll have to convince me that the advantages are greater than the disadvantages."

GIVE-AWAYS

"Healthy 6-week-old kittens, will deliver." (Jackson 8-4891.)

"Four-month-old male pup, part-Irish setter." (Sterling 7800, extension 698, from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m.)

PERSONAL NOTES

Barbara W. Moran, 419 Marietta pl. nw.: Glad everything worked out okay. Incidentally, you must have missed my item about the new phone book listing our upcoming L st. address, but it's okay. The post-office delivered your letter to 1337 E st. nw., where we're still doing business at the same old stand—and looking forward to moving day like a schoolboy looks forward to Saturday.

Mrs. Inas Kackley, 930 West Virginia ave., Martinsburg, W. Va.: If my picture appeared here, the jokes wouldn't seem nearly as funny by comparison. Thanks for the kind words and hurry up and get well.

Mrs. Janie M. Burkhardt, RFD 5, Rockville, Md.: You're happy, the cat is happy, the people who adopted her are happy, and I'm happy to know that everybody else is happy. It's a great morning. Who's going to be the first to spoil it?

KID STUFF

Mrs. Esther Rosin of 923 Farragut st. nw. writes that she was very much amused by two little trick-or-treaters who arrived at her door (in full regalia) a good 10 days before Halloween.

"I think I can find some candy for you," said Mrs. Rosin, "but aren't you celebrating Halloween a bit early? It's not until the 31st, you know."

"We know," said one little girl, "but we're going to be in New York all next week and we want to get in our treats before we go."

Iowa Democrats 'Scaring' GOP

By Drew Pearson

Out in rock-ribbed Republican Iowa a lot of folks don't know much more about Democrats than a hog does about Sunday. But this year the Democrats are throwing a slight scare into the Republicans and here are three factors helping them do it:

1. "Old Hector" whisky.
2. P-60 antifreeze.
3. A bona-fide dirt farmer running for the Senate on the Democratic ticket.

Loveland

The bona fide farmer is Al Loveland, who can't make a speech much better than a rooster can lay eggs. But he served faithfully in the United States Department of Agriculture as Undersecretary, knows about half the farmers in Iowa, and has uncovered the rather important fact that his opponent, GOP Senator Bourke Hickenlooper, attended only one out of six meetings of the Senate Agriculture Committee.

As a result, Loveland has been effectively asking Iowa voters: "Would you hire a hand who came to work one day out of six?"

Instead of attending meetings of the Agriculture Committee, Senator Hickenlooper had led the bed-peeping probes first of the Atomic Energy Commission, then of the State Department.

The probe of the Atomic Energy Commission backfired badly, partly because the former editor of the Des Moines Register-Tribune, W. W. Waymack, was then a member of the commission and people in Iowa knew he wouldn't stand for atomic secrets leaking; partly because every atomic leak so far has been nailed on the Army. Not a single leak has been nailed on the civilian-controlled commission that Hickenlooper made so many charges against.

Hound-Dog

Hickenlooper's probe of the State Department, in which he followed in the footsteps of grandstanding Joe McCarthy, looked as if it would pay better political dividends. Everyone pointed to his big primary majority and said: "At least Bourke's hound-dogging has been rewarded."

But now folks are inclined to figure that a State Department which acted so forthrightly in Korea couldn't have harbored many Communists, and that maybe hound-dog Hickenlooper got hold of a scent that was about 5 years old.

Hickenlooper will probably win in November. The normal GOP margin in Iowa seems fairly certain to carry him through. But he isn't being helped any by two other developments. These are:

1. The Republican-controlled State liquor commission loaded itself up with a lot of "Old Hector" whisky, aged 3 years, when it could have bought bonded whisky, guaranteed by the Federal Government to be 4 years old at almost the same price. Why the GOP commissioners went for Old Hector instead of the better grade is a question the Democrats want answered. So far none has been forthcoming.

2. Iowa's GOP Secretary of Agriculture, Clyde Spry, aproved the purchase of an antifreeze for trucks despite the fact that Iowa State College warned that this brand of antifreeze—P-60—contained salt and would ruin engines. The United States Bureau of Standards in Washington also refused to OK P-60 antifreeze, but GOP Secretary Spry OK'd P-60 just the same. The Democrats now want to know why.

In fact, Lester Gillette, Democratic candidate for Governor, goes further than this.

"It would be better," he says, "to put Old Hector whisky in our radiators and drink the P-60."

Friendship Builders

Last year, a group of young Austrians visited the United States—some under the sponsorship of the Junior Chamber of Commerce—to build friendship between the United States and Europe. This year, however, the friendship program is being halted at Ellis Island—thanks to the new McCarran Act.

What Congress apparently did not realize when it rushed the McCarran bill over the White House veto was that it would bar some of our best friends in Europe—among them Ernest Reuter, the heroic mayor of west Berlin. Reuter has consistently resisted Soviet attempts to penetrate the Allied area, but in 1919 he was a Communist. And though he has long since reformed, he is automatically barred from the United States of America under the McCarran bill.

Likewise barred are the young Austrians who, like every Austrian, at one time automatically were members of the Nazi Party.

Forthright Senator Langer of North Dakota recently called this to the attention of the White House.

"As you know," Langer wrote the President, "all persons in Germany and Austria were required to belong to such groups, and school-age children were naturally included. As a result, some of the students in the tour may be refused entry to this country, despite the fact they were thoroughly screened by American consulates in Austria. In these days when we are trying to set an example to the world of our American way of life, I believe it of great importance for these young people to learn firsthand the many advantages of a Government such as ours."

The 1949 Austrian tour was a whopping success in the United States and Canada. Thirty young Austrians, backed by private subscription at home, came here to present Austrian folk dances and songs, and were acclaimed wherever they appeared.

70th Year Helping Build Greater Washington
Cherrydale, Va.
. . . Arlington County Subdivision along Lee Highway, approximately two miles from Key Bridge.

Cherrydale takes its name from the fabulous cherry orchards owned by Dors Donaldson, who lived at the corner of what is now Quincy Street, and Lee Highway. He planted cherry trees along the road leading to his home, and his harvest of luscious fruit was the envy of the countryside.

When the busy thoroughfare that is now Lee Highway was picturesque Cherrydale Road, when a single drug and grocery store marked the beginning of today's flourishing community, Washington Permanent was already aiding the growth of Washington with convenient home loans. May we help YOU fulfill your plans for buying, building, remodeling, or refinancing in one of Greater Washington's communities?

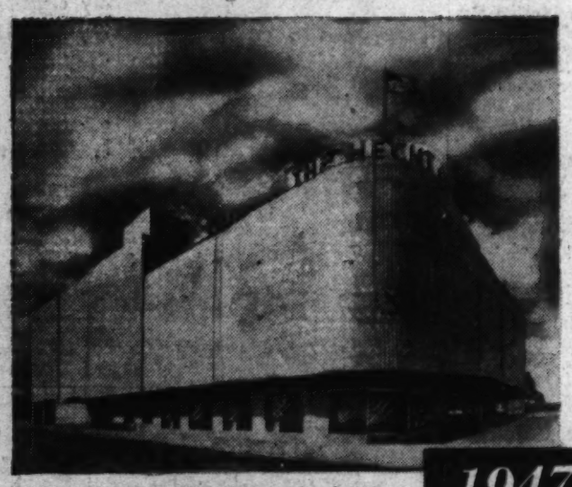
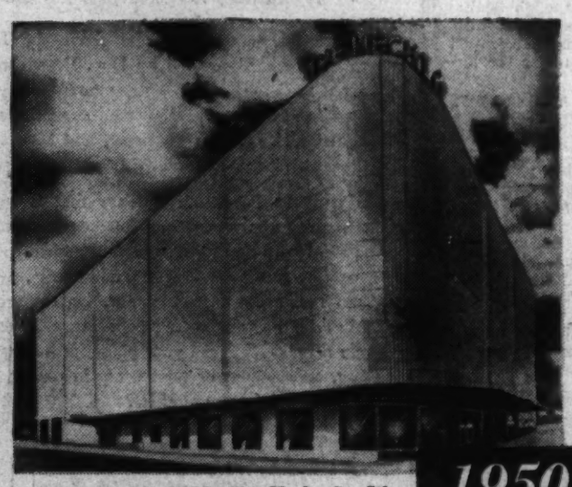
WASHINGTON'S LARGEST, MOST COMPLETE SUBURBAN DEPARTMENT STORE

THE HECHT CO. SILVER SPRING CELEBRATES ITS 3rd ANNIVERSARY!



NOVEMBER 1, 1947. The Hecht Co. Silver Spring opened its doors in one of the fastest growing communities in America.



AUGUST 11, 1950. The Hecht Co. Silver Spring added two huge new selling floors and introduced the first suburban Downstairs Store in America.

You made it what it is today . . . America's most complete suburban department store! You made it the talk of the retailing world . . . by your overwhelming response since the day of its birth. Now our "baby" is three years old . . . and what a crowded history you've given it! Only 36 months ago, we opened our doors for the first time. You clogged the highways, trooped in droves, swamped us . . . overjoyed to find at last . . . right at your door step . . . a complete department store, offering every metropolitan facility! You cheered the free parking, adjacent to the store. You blessed the two night openings every week when the whole family had a shopping party. Best of all, you applauded the huge stocks of famous-name merchandise, the same nationally known brands for which our downtown store is distinguished. Your shopping demands swelled so, we soon outgrew our swaddling clothes! We had to let out "seams" and take down "hems!" Expansion was imperative! So last August we raised the roof. Literally! We raised the roof to add two whole new floors! Bringing you a block-long Appliance Floor, A Housewares Department out of this world. A terrifically enlarged Men's Department. Best of all, we brought to Silver Spring the first complete suburban Downstairs Store in America! Now we're a big, bustling five-floor store of 120 individual shops. Stream-lined, spacious, completely air-conditioned and with escalators galore. Our "baby's" going on four . . . and growing more. Come tonight! Bring the family! Shop late. You'll find it great!
